Spain Defeat Of Riffians Dubbed Fake

Capture of Ajdir Last Month Declared to Be Manufactured Victory—French Disconcerted by Ally

City Still Remains In Riffians' Hands

(Copyright, 1925, in United States, Great Britain, South America and Japan by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)

TANGIER, Nov. 14.—In view of the great celebrations which were held in Spain six weeks ago over the official reported capture of Ajdir, Riff coastal city and former home of Abd-el-Krim, it will be interesting to review briefly the situation on the Ajdir front.

The Spanish did not capture Ajdir at that time, nor have they done it since, unless within the past few days. My latest reliable information of the position at Ajdir was on October 25, when the Spanish forces were entrenched along a line of hills directly next to the hill on which Ajdir stands.

French Disconcerted

The Spanish announcement of Ajdir's capture has undoubtedly puzzled the French, who have been through their information service that the city is still in Riff hands. If the Spanish government hoped to obtain a temporary political advantage by manufacturing this victory, it only makes their position more difficult when they are obliged to announce a retreat. But, it is even more difficult to explain why they involved the person of their king in such celebrations.

Allies to Evacuate Cologne Area Dec. 1

Germany Informed of Ambassadorial Decision—Teuton Disarmament Satisfies

PARIS, Nov. 14.—The Cologne area will be evacuated December 1, the Allied Council of Ambassadors decided officially this evening, the council having been satisfied by the explanations given by Germany in her latest disarmament note. The German Ambassador, Herr von Hoesch, was immediately informed of the council's decision.

The council agreed to send the German Government a letter this evening making known certain reductions in the occupation of other Rhineland territory on which the Allies have decided.

Tenth Train Wreck Victim Identified

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J., Nov. 14.—The tenth victim of the Pennsylvania railroad wreck near Plainville early Thursday was identified as Earl T. Brown, of Thomaston, Me.

Timothy J. Carroll, of Jersey City, engineer of one of the trains, was arrested on ten warrants charging manslaughter in connection with the wreck last night and was today released from the Middlesex county jail on $10,000 bail.

Bruce Government Is Returned To Power at Australian Polls

MELBOURNE, Nov. 15.—Forecast based on returns received up until an early hour today gave the Government forty-six seats against twenty-eight to Labor in the next Parliament chosen in yesterday's general election. Premier Bruce was re-elected for the Flinders seat, Victoria.

The elections were held under novel conditions, the new law making voting compulsory being invoked. For failure to cast a ballot a penalty of two pounds sterling was provided. This brought out a record poll, the women being especially prominent.

The standing of the parties upon the dissolution of the House was: Labor, 29; Nationalists, 27; Country Party, 14; Liberals, 4; Independent, 4; total 78.

While the Laborites were in the majority, the Nationalists, under Premier Bruce and the Country Party, under Dr. Earle Page, formed a coalition by which the Government carried on.

Mummy of Tutankhamen Clad in Golden Armor

Pharaoh Lies in Gold Shell—Sword on Each Side—Two Daggers at Belt—Gold Plate on Chest, Greaves of Gold on Legs, Crown on Head

(Copyright, in United States, Canada, and all other countries by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)

By JOHN L. BALDERSTON

Special Correspondent of The Colonist and the Vancouver News-Advertiser

LUXOR, Egypt, Nov. 14.—Howard Carter, French Director of Antiquities, and the Egyptian Government directors, continued today his examination of the mummy of King Tutankhamen.

Although the unwrapping was still uncompleted, it is probable that the main secrets of the inner coffin have now been disclosed.

Carter, Lacau, and the others left the tomb of Seti noon after midday and spent the afternoon composing the official communiqué which will be given out tomorrow. If the translation into Arabic, which is the pride initials upon, is completed in time, the newspapermen must then translate the Arabic into English.

Head Not Yet Uncovered

I obtained access to the tomb today further details of the work done.

The mummy is still being cut off, while the king still lies in his shell moulded in his form.

The mummy this afternoon had been uncovered as far as the chest.

On each side of the king lay a sword, beautifully chased in gold.

Around his waist was a gold belt with two daggers. His chest was covered with a gold plate incised with an image of the sun god and protecting wings like of the stone sarcophagus. Greaves of gold, chased with exquisite pictures, covered the boy king's legs, of which the bones are notably small.

Crown on Head

The king wears a crown. That I learned definitely, but whether it is a true royal crown of Upper and Lower Egypt or merely a diadem, is yet uncertain. Although the face of the mummy is not yet disclosed, the crown itself, covered with lines of wrappings, was exposed to view by Carter.

From conversations at the tomb today with Lacau and Carter, I gather that for reasons impossible to learn, the official communiqué will not present all the relevant facts of their discoveries. No mention, said Lacau, will be made of the age of the king until further medical examination is completed.

It is true, however, as called yesterday, that cursory examination of a part of the body convinced the directors present that Tutankhamen was a mere boy when he died.

No theory as to the cause of death can be formed from the evidence at present available, since no scientific

Reds Loose Propaganda In Schools

Organized Along Boy Scout Lines

"Thousands of Boys and Girls Are Following the Boss Blindly," Children Are Told by "Pioneers"

WINNIPEG, Nov. 14.—A front page article published in The Manitoba Free Press today declares a publication of pronounced, even rabid, Communist leanings is being distributed among pupils attending Winnipeg public schools—an effort of "young Communists, with a missionary spirit, to convert schoolmates to the glory of the soviet triumph."

Pupils have been found reading the publication in schools in North Winnipeg, where the foreign population resides. The paper is known as Our Dawn and is printed by the "Winnipeg Young Pioneers," a branch of the Canadian Communist party, composed of children of from ten to fifteen years of age.

Already Issued Three Times

It is not a pretentious work, but mimeographed from typewritten sheets on newspaper of about foolscap size, and appears at irregular intervals. To date three issues have appeared, one each in September, October and November. The details of the publication of the paper were, according to The Free Press, obtained from H. M. Bartholomew, local district organizer of the Communist party in Canada.

The Free Press says:

"The first issue makes brief announcements as to the activities of the Pioneer 'patrols,' which are evidently organized along the same lines as the boy scouts. The young members are urged to pass on the paper to their schoolfellows as often as possible. The publication refers to the activities of the Karl Marx patrol and the Lenin patrol."

Mining Strikes Upheld

"A fiery illustrated article by the first apostle of the New Dawn, who signs himself 'Paul,' deals with the mining strikes in Nova Scotia and the coal miners' strike in the United States. Paul would have the miners of Canada and the United States unite to do battle with the 'Goulds'."

"An editorial says the Pioneer's membership has doubled in the last two months, yet we must remember that thousands of boys and girls are following the Boss blindly and have never heard of the Pioneers and Our Dawn."

The articles published in Our Dawn indicate a dislike for religious teachings, and the slogan of the young pioneers is declared to be: "Every school our fortress—let us be each a Bolshevik in deed as well as in word."

Hallowe'en Capitalist Holiday

The Communist reaction, Hallowe'en is expressed, states The Free Press, in a brief article which says that "Hallowe'en is a capitalist ghost holiday."

The Free Press continues: "While school authorities were quite certain that any attempt to spread such propaganda among public school children would be looked upon with extreme disfavor and promptly suppressed, they were not prepared to say that the dissemination of reading matter of this kind constituted a real offence."

Would Resume Debt Party

PARIS, Nov. 14.—Premier Painlevé and Foreign Minister Briand are anxious to reopen the debt negotiations with Washington, but they are greatly in doubt as to how this could be tactfully and effectively done. The question is being examined with utmost care by the officials of the Financial Department and Foreign Office.

Police Net Eight Liquor Offenders

Raids in Stewart and Anxoy Bring Crown $3,300—Intoxicants Seized

PRINCE RUPERT, Nov. 14.—Fines totalling $3,300 were collected and liquor valued at several hundred dollars was confiscated as a result of operations recently at Stewart and Anxoy of liquor board operators who returned to the city this morning.

The alleged bootleggers penalized at Stewart were: Henry Rivard, $1,000; Helen Moxon, Alexander Fraser, $100; and Joseph and Marie Siebel, each $300. At Anxoy, Angeline Adam and Helen Blackburn were each assessed $400, and Mrs. Thompson, $300. Jail sentences were offered in lieu of fines, but the offenders in each case chose to pay up.

Asphalt Arab Makes Off With Lady Friend's Cash

WINNIPEG, Nov. 14.—Olef Anderson, thirty-two-year-old Arab, is in the hands of the police and a lady friend is missing. The price of two meals obtained at a fashionable downtown restaurant, Olef, while waiting to take a young lady to dinner, he said to have stolen $35 from her purse and then to have deserted her in the restaurant. She paid for the meals.

One-Time Cossack May Become Shah of Persia

REZA KHAN

Premier of Persia and head of the Government which recently deposed the Shah on the ground that the monarch preferred to loiter in Paris than rule in Persia. Reports from Persia indicate that Reza Khan may now mount the throne himself.

Tablet Will Be Unveiled Here To Navigators

Gonzales Hill Will Be Scene of Ceremony Perpetuating Memory of Eighteenth Century Seamen

Fruition of Long Effort

Victoria will on Thursday afternoon pay tribute to the eighteenth century navigators who first cruised the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

In unveiling a memorial to these pioneers of geographical knowledge, the city gives homage to men who first described the beauty of her location, as viewed from the silvery waters of the Strait.

On Gonzales Hill the commemorative tablet and cairn has been placed and its unveiling will be linked with two especially interesting features, the appearance of a descendant of the intrepid navigator, Captain Charles William Barkley, and the dropping of the flag of Britain and Canada.

The reappearance of the intrepid and gold bars of Spain after 130 years on Vancouver Island is itself a link with the brief but picturesque regime of the Spaniards in Northwest America.

Landmark to Navigators

The site has been chosen because it has been a landmark to every navigator who sought to solve the mystery of the reputed Strait of Anian, the mythical northwest passage from the Pacific to the Atlantic, which was to afford an alternative route to the Indies. The cairn will stand as a perpetual memorial to the triumph of Captain Vancouver, after failures by the Spanish explorers, and as a reminder that the visitor stands on historic ground, around which cluster associations of an uncommon kind.

Programme for Unveiling

The tentative programme for the unveiling is at present as follows:

His Honor Judge Howay will make an explanatory statement in view of his presidency of the British Columbia Historical Association. Following this His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor will make a speech introductory to the unveiling of the cairn by Mr. Robert K. Barkley.

In compliment to the memory of the eighteenth century navigators.

London Broadcasts Midair Concert

Music of Orchestra Circling Over City in Plane Put on Ether Waves

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Thousands of radio enthusiasts all over the British Isles and in Europe today were discussing their experience last night of tuning in on celestial music—music that had its actual source in the heavens, as distinguished from the ether-borne waves of the usual musical programme.

These melodies, not the strains of angelic harps or the music of the spheres, came from a famous London orchestra of forty pieces, sent up in a giant express plane and playing while circling over London at a height of 1,000 feet. The concert, lasting two hours, was staged by the London broadcasting station.

Saskatoon Threshing Ends

SASKATOON, Nov. 14.—With the exception of a few farms where wheat has been stacked, threshing has been completed in the Saskatoon district for some days. Roads are in fairly good condition, weather has been excellent and conditions for marketing could hardly be improved upon.

Saguenay Project Assured

QUEBEC, Nov. 14.—C. G. Allan, a New York financier, has been elected president of the Duke-Price Co., succeeding the late J. B. Duke, thus allowing the original huge power development plans in the Saguenay district to be carried out. The announcement was made by J. M. Price, vice-president of the company.

Eggs Used as Armenian Currency; Bad Returned as "Illegal Tender"

ERIVAN, Armenia, Nov. 14.—Eggs are being used as currency in the Kara Kala district of Armenia, where the American Near East relief is operating. Twelve of the eggs are accepted as their "face value" as equivalent to one rouble, or fifty cents in American money. If any of the eggs prove bad they may be returned as "illegal tender."

The new form of "currency" is made necessary owing to the difficulty of getting the regular rouble money to Kara Kala, which is buried deep in the mountains of Armenia. A pair of American shoes in Kara Kala costs 200 eggs.

Miss Dorothy Stratton, of New York City, who is in charge of the relief work in that area, reports that five chickens also are coming into use as currency, one chicken being accepted as a rouble and a half.

150 Rebels Killed In Syrian Attack On Native Village

Insurgent Assault on City Feared; Townspeople Continue to Depart

BEIRUT, Syria, Nov. 14.—One hundred and fifty bandits and forty Maronites have been killed during an attack of brigands on the village of Kawkaba, near Hasbaya. The information comes from French sources.

When the battle ended the munitions of the villagers were exhausted, and they retired toward Mardjeyoun, where large French forces are concentrating in order to prevent the retreat of the bandits.

The French understand that the bandits have treated women and children with the utmost cruelty.

Damascus is described as no longer menaced except for 250 brigands who have been levying tribute on outlying villages for a band roaming to the northward of Damascus.

Four Christians have been killed by the bandits a few miles from Damascus.

Damascus Almost Besieged

DAMASCUS, Nov. 14.—Damascus is like a besieged city. Everybody expects the military must be indoors by 8 o'clock in the evening and during the day there are so many soldiers in the narrow streets that one is almost continually bumping into rifles, blocking one's way through barred wire entanglements or stumbling across sandbagged barricades.

At the curfew hour the street cars cease running, the people disappear like magic and the most beautiful of the Syrian coasts becomes as dead, apparently, as the desert surrounding it.

Rebels Active at Night

Outside Damascus hardly a night passes that the rebels do not burn a bridge leading to the city, raid a suburb or commit some other depredation requiring the dispatch of a French expeditionary force.

All the territory between Mount Hemon and Wadi Ajlami, about 100 square miles, now is in the hands of the rebellious tribesmen and their national allies and the French occupy only six cities on the railway from Aleppo, in the north, to Dara in the south.

Fifty thousand troops, or double the force now in Syria, would be required to restore order in the country. Even when these reinforcements arrive, it is feared they will suffer heavy losses in guerrilla warfare.

Workmen are clearing the debris from the principal streets of Damascus and rebuilding the ruined bazaars, but trade is paralyzed and no buyers answer the cries of the merchants.

Archaeologist Lure Treasures

In the devastated residential quarters of the Arab aristocracy the owners visit their ruined palaces, directing their servants in searches for household treasures.

Although notable citizens reassure the populace that the insurrectionists will make no attempt to take the city, knowing that such action would only result in another French bombardment and consequently heavy loss of life, there is an unmistakable air of tension. Everybody seems to be waiting for something to happen and people continue to leave in the direction of the Mediterranean.

Reinforcements Arrive

PARIS, Nov. 14.—French reinforcements have begun arriving in Syria. The appearance of the fresh troops according to the latest reports, produced an immediate effect upon the rebels and the Druse tribesmen, among the most active of the insurrectionists, returned to the mountain regions.

The country has calmed down, the dispatches say, and only one small band of rebels in the field in the Damascus region.

Coroner Probes Railway Deaths

Two Alberta Stockmen Killed in Collision on Canadian Pacific Line

MIRBURN, B.C., Nov. 14.—An inquest was commenced by Coroner E. A. McQuarrie Schmidt, forty, and Joseph of William Schmidt, forty, and Joseph Stringer, twenty-six, in charge of stock being shipped from Alberta, who were killed instantly in a rear-end collision between two freight trains on the C.P.R. main line at Haisla last night. After viewing the bodies, the evidence of John Childs, of Calgary, was taken, and the inquest adjourned until 10:30 o'clock Wednesday morning. Childs failed to throw any further light on the case. He said he was asleep at the time, and was only awakened in time to jump before the impact.

The two men killed were riding in the caboose of a mixed stock and freight train, from which conductor W. Wood, John Smith of Abbotsford, John Childs of Calgary, and a brakeman escaped by jumping just before the collision.

Net Debt Given As Under Forty Million Dollars

Minister of Finance Computes Gross Debt of British Columbia as Seventy-Seven Millions

Sinking Fund Has Grown

The gross debt of the Province of British Columbia on November 1, 1925, including bonded debt and treasury bills, was $76,888,249, according to figures presented by Hon. Dr. Maclean, Minister of Finance. The Government holds a total of $14,575,075 in sinking funds, and possesses revenue producing debt, exclusive of railways, of $12,134,948, the statement was submitted. The two sums from the gross debt, a net debt of $43,226,221 is given.

Treasury bills at present outstanding total $8,676,048, these liabilities being of the nature of ninety-day notes renewable on December 3. Unexercised borrowing powers under the various loans acts on November 1 total $2,761,850.

A further statement of borrowings during the past year shows $5,000,000 of bond issues, mostly for refunding purposes, some of them being two and three issues costing as low as 4.75 per cent. Another $2,800,000 was borrowed on treasury bills during the year, and $450,000 of the mortgage by bond was also new money for highways and bridges.

A comparison with last year's debt shows that the increase in the public debt for the year is only $138,000, accounted for by the fact that loans retired during the year offset the increased borrowings.

Spain Defeat of Rifians Dubbed Fake

The only honest explanation possible is that the Spanish field commanders were unaware of the exact location of Ajdir and supposed they had captured the place, when in reality they had only occupied one or two houses in the neighborhood.

Ajdir, as used by the Spaniards, is a loose term geographically and often refers to the whole area around the Bay of Alhucman.

In reality, Ajdir is a Rif village, scattered over the top of a clay hill. Its military importance is its batteries of sturdy French guns, operated by good German artillery men. These batteries, numerous and cunningly concealed, control all the approaches to Ajdir.

Spanish Attack Unlikely
Any Spanish advance on Ajdir itself would be accomplished by such heavy losses that it is highly unlikely that the Spaniards will wish to undertake it.

Ajdir contains no public buildings—only about twenty houses, none specially large, all made of mud. Abdel-Krim has not been in Ajdir for a year and a half—since his house there was destroyed by Spanish raids. He possesses two small houses there, one of which he turned over to me while I was in Ajdir.

The French information service is perfectly well aware that the so-called capture of Ajdir was either a manufactured victory or an unparalleled example of military ignorance of geography. Yet the French naturally are unable to deny their ally's reports of a great victory. The clearing-up of the situation therefore rests with the Spaniards.

Spanish Operations
The history of the Spanish attack on Ajdir is as follows: In September a Spanish force numbering between 5,000 and 6,000 landed at Capa Moro Nuevo. Aided by French and Spanish troops, they succeeded in establishing themselves on Moro Nuevo Rock, a barren jagged rock sticking out into the sea, and from there they began to clear the country of the Beni Hukoya tribe. On Moro Nuevo they remained, taking water and food from the Spanish ships for nearly six weeks. During the last week they advanced 1,000 yards to the shore.

In October this situation changed, thanks to heavy reinforcements from Spain. The Spanish advanced slowly but steadily and on October 23—after reliable information I possess—they were entrenched along a line of hills directly facing Ajdir.

Undoubtedly the Spaniards had advanced until they controlled the whole Moro Nuevo Cape. They now have water and food supply on the mainland, but whether they will be able to maintain themselves in their exceedingly difficult position throughout the winter is doubtful.

Krim Plans Busy Winter
Abdel-Krim is preparing to give them a lively winter.

The lull in hostilities on the French front is already permitting Abdel-Krim to withdraw to the Rif large numbers of his own regular army, and it is obviously certain that he will not allow the Spaniards to remain on the mainland any longer than he can help.

This is particularly sure because his brother Nidi Mohammed, commander-in-chief of the Rif army, represents the presence of the Spaniards keenly, and is willing to sacrifice advantages elsewhere to get them out of the Rif territory.

As a national reporter, I have no wish to minimize the Spanish victories, but it is necessary to point out that their advance in the Ajdir region was made by 15,000 European troops, aided heavily by artillery and excellent aviation squadrons, against 500 to 600 Rifians armed with rifles, and that nevertheless it took Spain two months to get three miles inland.

This accomplishment merits such extravagant celebrations as greeted the Spaniards when they entered the Ajdir region, and the Moroccan authorities are not what they used to be.

Moral Effect of Attack Nil
As to the purposes and significance of the Ajdir action, accounts will vary greatly. Abdel-Krim himself believes that the action was forced by France, under the impression that an attack at Ajdir itself would have a tremendous moral effect in the Rif. I am now informed that the French brought no pressure to bear on the Spaniards and that an influential section of the Moroccan authorities believed it was a mistake.

From the viewpoint of an-called "moral effect," I can testify that the action was a mistake. The moral effect in the Rif has been nil. As many observers, as well as both Spanish and French information services have reported constantly,

"moral" in the European sense is non-existent in the Rif. The Spaniards have attacked the most warlike tribes of Africa—the Beni Hukoya and the Beni Warrachel—both of whom are excellently disciplined fighting animals, who thrive on difficulties. Even their women and children behave like soldiers and their calm under fire or bombs is extraordinary.

The Spaniards have, therefore, occupied a region where they will have a constant battle, day and night, and which eventually they must evacuate. Their situation is bound to become increasingly unenviable throughout the winter, and if the Spanish Government obtained a temporary political advantage by announcing victory, it only makes more difficult their position when they are obliged to announce retreat.

Peace Signs Seen
Another version of the Ajdir affair, however, puts it in an entirely different light. It has been stated to me by an official whom I consider the best informed in Morocco, that the object of the Ajdir move was exclusively political, designed to supply the Spanish Government with a military victory. Without which they believe public opinion in Spain would not countenance any negotiations with Abdel-Krim. This official believes that the advance on Ajdir supplied this necessary victory, and that conversations are now privately in course at Ajdir between the Spanish and Abdel-Krim, as a preliminary to the negotiation of a peace.

I have no information from any other source on the subject, but I have the strongest possible belief that Abdel-Krim will not negotiate with the Spaniards as long as they remain on the mainland of the Rif.

The information which I have presented regarding the military situation at Ajdir is based on the following circumstances: Until October 1 I was in Ajdir, afterwards remaining in constant telephonic communication with Ajdir and its neighboring central—a big military telephone central where all lines converge, located at Asar.

Thinks Information Correct
I was also in constant communication with Ajdir through Rif soldiers who came and went, and through the German and American deserters whom I encountered on the way to Tangier. For instance, there was no earthly reason why the American negro, Wesley Williams, who came direct from Ajdir, should lie to me. I see no reason why the Germans should either.

But the most incontestable evidence is supplied by the Italian member of parliament, Alfredo Morea, who left Abdel-Krim's palace at Ait Karama on October 13, after an interview with the Rif Sultan. He came direct to Sheehan and accompanied me to Tangier. His story is exactly the same as that told by the American and German deserters, by the Rif couriers, and by Abdel-Krim himself over the telephone.

Therefore, I am confidently able to state that the Spaniards advanced their lines after I left Ajdir, but did not capture the village.

The most conclusive proof of all is that my information agrees exactly with that in the possession of the French on this subject.

Pedigreed Animals Latest Arrivals of Their Kind to Reach Vancouver Island

Two pairs of valuable black and silver foxes are on display in the window of the Greenwood real estate office, in the Metropolis Building, Yates Street, the Western sales headquarters for the "Magpie Silver Black Fox Company. They are beautiful, highly pedigreed animals, richly coated with jet black fur, glinting with silver, their bushy brushes tapering into silver white. They are the latest arrivals of their kind to the island, and pass their time staring speculatively at the passing populace, which will, without doubt, soon reverse the order and become speculative with regard to them.

Vancouver Island is rapidly becoming recognized as a field for fox farming, equal, if not superior, to Prince Edward Island, according to Mr. Clarence MacKenzie, who, Mr. W. M. Roberts, former managing director of the Roanoke Fox Company, represents the company in the West. Fox farming is already taking firm hold in the Province, and it has been found that while the fur is of equal quality with that produced on P.E.I., it has added advantage of reaching the market at an earlier period.

In fact, a difference of six weeks has been recorded. It has also been noted that the fur produced at east and west of Canada is of a much finer and more valuable quality than that of the Far North.

The report of the last annual New York sale gives an idea of the present and over-ascending value of the silver black fox. The best sales were made with the clear black skins with plenty of silver, and the highest price paid for the half silver grade was $390.

The entire offering averaged twenty-five per cent above the spring sales. It was Sir Charles Dillon who, in 1884, made the first successful attempt to raise foxes in captivity at Prince Edward Island. Until about fifteen years ago the business was still in the experimental stage, but now has become well established. The particular value of the silver black fur rests in the fact that it cannot be imitated, since the hairs are black at either end with middle bandings of silver.

In introducing new farm stock into a country the necessity of beginning with a good strain cannot be over-estimated, since upon this depends the success of the enterprise with regard to the health and fibre of the animals, and the quality of the fur they bear. The four foxes on display in the Metropolis Building have a high pedigree.

The two males are the offspring of Magic Bower, sire, a celebrated fox and head of the herd at Summerside, Prince Edward Island, and Magic Mille, dam, and the two females of Magic Bower and Magic Parkie.

Bronchitis More Than a Cold

Often develops rapidly into pneumonia—relief is found in Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

Any cold is serious enough when its dreadful possibilities are considered, but when there is soreness or tightness in the chest and a dry hard cough you can look for bronchitis, which is often confused with an ordinary cold. It is usually known by aching limbs and body pains, chilly feelings, weariness and weakness, pain in the chest and a tight, tearing cough. Fever, dry skin, thirst, coated tongue and constipation are other symptoms. Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine seems almost like a specific for bronchitis because it is so successful in loosening up the cough, aiding expectoration and preventing the inflammation from reaching the lungs.

Lessons Hit As Slavery

Alderman Woodward Condemns Homework—Call for Abolition of Home Studies

Homework for school children was styled "modern child slavery" by Ald. E. S. Woodward, in an interview with The Colonist last night.

Ald. Woodward announced his intention to work actively in support of the candidature for school trusteeship of any person who will pledge his word to work for the abolition of home lessons.

"I've observed the injurious effect of this form of slavery on the lives of its hapless victims, and I think it is time it was completely stopped," said Ald. Woodward. "In my judgment there should be a period of supervised study after the regular daily classes have ended and before the student or pupil is dismissed. After his dismissal by the teacher the child should be permitted to lead his own life untrammelled by the worries of school lessons.

"Periods of properly supervised play would have to be arranged, of course, but this should not be a difficult thing. The teachers themselves would probably welcome the study period after school hours as an excellent opportunity to correct examination papers and prepare teaching lessons for the following day's work.

"At any rate the time has come for homework to be stopped completely. Educational authorities, I feel confident, will be able to work out the ways and means of doing so."

Spain's share in the exploration of the waters, invitation has been extended to the Spanish Consul of Seattle to be present at the ceremony. Another speech will be made on behalf of the Oak Bay Council, which provided the site for the cairn and has had improvements made upon Denison Road, the road of approach, for the occasion of unveiling.

Invitation to Meeting

An invitation will be announced to the meeting of the Historical Association to be held on the following day, November 20. At this meeting, which will be of a special nature, His Honor Judge Howey will give a full and interesting account of the explorations, profusely illustrated with slides.

The guests of honor of the occasion will be members of the families of William Henry McNeill, Sir James Douglas, Charles Ross and Roderick Finlayson.

Captain Charles William Barkley discovered the British in the channel trading ship Imperial Eagle, which was at the time flying Austrian colors to evade the procuring of a licence to trade in the strait. The vessel was sailing under the British flag had to obtain. Captain Barkley had with him his bride, a young girl of seventeen, Frances Howey, and her mother, whose interesting journal the history of the voyage has been largely taken.

Captain William Henry McNeill was the first man to report to the Hudson's Bay Company, in whose services he was engaged, from the southern part of Vancouver Island, in 1831. Sir James Douglas, who explored the land and reported for the Hudson's Bay Company in 1842 and erected the fort in 1843. Charles Ross was the first man in charge of the fort and after his death in 1846 Roderick Finlayson became the chief factor.

The erection of the cairn has entailed a tremendous lot of work, for a large share of which great credit is due Mr. C. C. Pemberton, who undertook the negotiations, and the collection of the necessary historical data to warrant the Historic Sites and Monuments Board to recognize the site.

examination of the mummy has yet been made.

Carter and his English and American assistants loyally obey their orders not to give any information. When I asked whether a description of the crown jewels would be given out in the coming statement, he made an evasive reply. When asked whether the crown of Upper and Lower Egypt had been found he said, "How can I tell at this stage what the various objects are. Perhaps they are only partially visible and perhaps the part already seen gives a misleading idea."

Police Watch Correspondent
Some echoes of the partial account of the new wonders and finds which I have been able to cable reached Luxor today, making interviews with the workers additionally difficult, as I was under constant surveillance, being followed and preceded up the Valley of the Kings by Egyptian soldiers mounted on donkeys and carrying carbines. Today when I arrived at the Royal Necropolis no other visitor was present, and four native strong arm men rushed out and ordered me away from the vicinity of the tomb, although I made no effort to approach the barrier.

I protested later to Prof. Lacau, who as always was most thoughtful and met me with the reply: "It is shocking that any news of the new finds should reach England and America before it reaches the Arabic press of Egypt."

The fact is, that the Arabic press shows no interest in Tutankhamen. Only two Arabic papers have published the previous communiqués regarding the excavations.

Mr. Vickery Has Given Splendid Aid to Philanthropic Efforts

MR. CHARLES V. VICKERY

Well known in Victoria through his relationship with one of Victoria's best known families, Mr. Charles V. Vickery has become a world figure through election to the chairmanship of Allied Philanthropies at a recent meeting in Stockholm.

Mr. Vickery is also known as the originator of Golden Rule Sunday, an annual observance, last year participated in by fifty-two nations, and in Canada and the United States by at least 1,000,000 families. It is believed that on December 6, 1925, there will not be less than 2,000,000 families on this continent who will co-operate.

The method is simple: Each participant to sit down to a meal such as is served to all the 100,000 children in orphanages in Bible lands. At the close each co-operator is asked to make an offering to assist these children such as he would wish someone else to give if they or theirs were orphans, were about to be turned out for lack of funds, or were asking for one meal a day.

Mr. F. Landsberg, the Victoria treasurer of the fund, is hoping for great success from the work of the many Golden Rule committees now at work and being set up in B.C.

The Lieutenant-Governor, His Honor Walter C. Nicol, has endorsed the movement, and through his influence committees are being formed in Nanaimo, Penikese, Roseland, Delta, Saanich, New Westminster, Burnaby, West Vancouver and other points.

Admiralty Abandons Hope for Sub Crew

Official Announcement Definitely Seals Fate of Sixty-Eight Men of M-1

LONDON, Nov. 14.—"The Admiralty deeply regrets that they can no longer hold out any hope that the crew of the M-1 still survive."

This brief official announcement today was taken as definitely sealing the fate of the sixty-eight officers and men entombed in the monitor submarine, which disappeared off the Devonshire coast during Thursday morning's manoeuvres.

There has been nothing to confirm the report of yesterday that the bulk of the vessel located in the channel was the submarine, rather than that of any of the numerous wrecks that are supposed to be lying on the bed of the Channel.

The absence of oil on the water in the vicinity where the M-1 submerged suggests to some of the Admiralty officials that the vessel was sound at the time she went down, and this fact encouraged some hope that the crew might be repairing an internal injury and that the submarine might ultimately come to the surface. The lapse of time since she went down, however, now has removed any such hope.

A burial service will be held on the spot tomorrow and a memorial service in the little church at the Portland dockyards.

Victoria Prisoner Escapes at Oakalla

Man Sentenced Here Makes Successful Break for Liberty at Prison Door

VANCOUVER, Nov. 14.—W. J. Richards, sentenced this morning at Victoria on a charge of indecent exposure, escaped from his guards on reaching Oakalla this evening, and is being sought by the police of Greater Vancouver.

According to the police here he is the same man who terrorized the West End and who was sent to Oakalla where his sentence expired some time ago. When being taken to the court house for trial here on his previous charge, he escaped and was not found for some days.

This evening, on his arrival from Victoria, he was taken to Oakalla for a term of six months, but in spite of handcuffs he escaped his guard when the door of the car was opened for him at the prison.

Six months' sentence was given William G. Richards, a late arrival in the city from Vancouver, who was convicted of an act of indecency and sentenced by Police Magistrate Jay yesterday. Accused denied the charge which, however, was proved to the satisfaction of the court.

What about Canada?

"The keystone of the arch of the British Empire," one of her great soldier statesmen called us the other day. Twenty-five years from now where will Canada be? What will be her population, her bank clearings, her world trade? Think!

"Number One Northern," one of our most spectacular claims to greatness, will play a big part in Canada's future. With a present annual crop more than ten times greater than at Confederation, there are still many millions of untouched fertile acres.

This great land is a heritage so magnificent that we sometimes fail to grasp its significance. Almost limitless natural resources are Canada's, and to develop them we have a business and financial fabric that time and again has demonstrated its stability. No commercial set-back can more than momentarily hinder our progress.

With such a foundation to build upon, Canada's greatness, twenty-five years hence, can be gauged only by the vision and aggressiveness of Canadians of today.

For almost a hundred years, when acres were to be planted, or crops moved to market—with unfailing faith in the land and its workers—this Bank has gladly helped with its great resources and experience.

Today, with 320 branches and sub-branches, world-wide affiliations and a progressive organization, The Bank of Nova Scotia still stands ready to provide Canadian business with a thoroughly up-to-date and progressive banking service.

ABUSES IN LEGISLATURE

Freedom of speech is essential to the independence of the Legislature, but that freedom is subject to censure or other punishment by the House wherein it abuses the privilege and transgresses the rules of orderly debate. There have been instances during the present session of members who offend and who have been far from free from reproach by the Speaker. There has been an instance of a member who has alluded to another member as "His Reverence." There has been an instance, too, of a member who alluded to a fellow member as "Archbishop of Canterbury." In both of these instances, in the manner of their delivery and since they were intended to have a belittling effect, there was a violation of the rules of the House and of all of a religious bent. It is a practice that should cease. The way one member should allude to another is as the Hon. Member for such or such a constituency, and where a member offends against this rule of debate he should be called to order by the Speaker or the attention of the Chair should be directed to the breach of order by another member.

There are well defined rules to be observed by Members of a Legislature during a debate and they are such as are designed to insure the order and decorum becoming a deliberate assembly. Laxity of control in this sense has not enhanced the reputation of our Provincial Legislature. There have been descents to buffoonery, which appears to pass among some of the legislators as current wit. In any case they have applauded what they should have condemned. The antics of a Sir Toby Belch do not appeal to the understanding. Indeed, in the interests of common decency, the Legislature as a whole should set an example to the people in behavior and in every sense of the contamination of the infectious stuff which is imported by the smugglers of adulterated metaphysics. The time of the House, as has been pointed out more than once, is wasted too much by the irrelevancies of slanging epithets and the use of epithets and nomenclature which the Speaker should not tolerate for an instant. There is a bad odor, sometimes indeed a nauseating one, created by an abuse of the language which would disgrace boys at school. The legislators best know whom the cap fits, and they know, too, as the Speaker does as well, that it is within their power to bring about a greater sense of decorum and thus to improve the public opinion of the legislative mind.

HAMPERING PRODUCTION

There is a committee of inquiry engaged on the British shipbuilding industry and it has issued an interim report which shows, for one thing, that while rates of wages in Britain are much higher than on the Continent and the length of the working week is only 47 hours as compared with 54 hours in Germany and Holland, yet it is not necessary to reduce wages or increase the working hours. What is necessary, however, to meet foreign competition, is that the Unions should allow readjustments in handling work and relax their rules of demarcation. There are illustrations of the kind of problem which arises from a rigid demarcation of the work to be done by the members of particular Unions. Some of the cases, the report says, would be simply ludicrous if the consequences were not so serious. One is quoted in this particular as follows:

A flanged pipe on a steamer's deck got broken. One of the crew—a boy—put a rough wooden protection around it. His superior, a foreman, decided whose job it was to remove the temporary protection. A fitter could mend the pipe, but he could not remove the wooden protection, though a kirk was a carpenter or a joiner to be called in. When that had been settled there had to be a second conference to decide whether the repair of the pipe was a plumber's or a fitter's work—a patent screw-top complicating the matter so much. The result in cash was that 125,000 worth of work cost £14. The report points out that an outstanding instance of craft rivalry occurred not long ago on the North East Coast. The manager of a shipbuilding firm, which had generously showed its interest in the local hospital, wanted two large notice boards on which to display an appeal for funds. It was not shipyard work at all, and the notice boards were to be presented to the hospital. A number of shipwrights were about to be discharged because of slackness of work, but the joiners were fully employed. The manager, therefore, asked the shipwrights to make the notice boards. The joiners immediately went on strike, claiming that shipwrights were doing their job, and they remained on strike for several weeks, although the work was taken out of the shipwrights' hands. It is these and similar instances that are acting as a handicap in the British shipbuilding industry, and leading to foreign firms securing contracts which should legitimately go to British firms if conditions in the premises could be improved.

VICTORIA'S WATER RIGHTS

The Legislature has a definite obligation, in substantiation of a law which stands on the statute book, in dealing with the private bill of the City of Victoria known as the "Equimatt Water Works Company Winding-Up Act, 1925." Since 1873 the City of Victoria has possessed the right to appropriate all springs, streams, lakes and bodies of water within a 20-mile radius of the municipality. The Equimatt Water Works have been exploited by this authority. Victoria now seeks ratification of its action from the Legislature, inasmuch as the franchise rights involved cannot be acquired by expropriation but only by legislation, and legislation is also necessary to enable the water company to distribute its capital assets among its shareholders.

The Legislature is concerned with the law of the case and the law gives to this city the power of expropriation. If the operation of that law were impeded it would be tantamount to a violation of rights that have existed for upwards of half a century. There is opposition to the acquisition of the Equimatt Water Works by surrounding municipalities, because they deem their rights to a water supply may be curtailed in some respect. There is legislation already existing which gives those municipalities certain rights which Victoria has no intention of infringing. Any further safeguard, within reason, and by that is meant such safeguard as will not take away the control of the water supply from the City of Victoria, will, we are assured, be acquiesced in by the City. The best safeguard of all would be the provision by the Legislature of a definition of the profit which Victoria should derive in selling water in bulk to the surrounding municipalities. That definition should be on a five-year basis, subject to be reopened at the end of each such term. In the case of a dispute between the municipalities concerned, the adjudicator should be of the Supreme Court. By that process party politics will not be permitted to dominate the situation and it is essential it should not where a water supply is concerned.

The city's memorandum dealing with the measure which comes up before the Private Bills Committee on Wednesday next, points out that it is a sound principle of British law that rights and privileges granted by statute should not be violated or taken away unless the same are used in abuse of public rights. There are already safeguards against any such abuse. If more are considered necessary they can be provided, but the principle advanced should not be violated. Victoria is on the strongest ground in the framing of the measure which it asks the Legislature to approve. It simply requests the substantiation of rights already conceded and having the endorsement of half a century's prescription.

THE MALAY JUNGLE

Mr. Carveth Wells, an indefatigable traveler, a keen observer and an interesting commentator, has been telling a London audience that it is quite true as stated by Darwin that Nature is in a condition of topsy-turvydom in the Malay jungles. The year is not divided into seasons down there. There is but one season, and that season is a season of continuous growth. One tree in the jungle may be laden with fruit while its immediate neighbor is in full flower. If you look up into the tree which is laden with fruit, you may see a fish perched on one of the branches eating the fruit.

THE MALAY JUNGLE

If the sight of that tree-climbing fish eating fruit is not considered a sufficiently curious thing and you watch a while longer in the hope of seeing some new phenomenon, you may see the fish jump down from the tree, plunge into a pool and take its morning dip, shake itself and climb up to its perch again.

Most of the living things in that jungle are of rank growth. That is because they keep growing throughout the year and because the weather is very moist as well as extremely hot. The largest snakes in the world sneak around in that tropical jungle and they sometimes feed upon the smallest mammals in the world, while a species of parrot that sleeps upside down curses the great serpent in voluble and violent terms for prematurely awakening it from its repose.

THE MALAY JUNGLE

The Malay Jungle is therefore a very curious place, and the fact does appear to be that all Nature down there is in a condition of topsy-turvydom compared with natural conditions in most parts of the world. And yet we are not sure that the conditions in our own particular part of the world, which we consider civilized, are not somewhat topsy-turvy at the present time.

THE MALAY JUNGLE

We venture to say that if Premier Oliver of British Columbia were in a position to "speak his mind" freely and frankly today he would say the political conditions in this Province are in a state of topsy-turvydom. We further venture to say that if Mr. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King were asked what he thought of the political conditions in the Dominion of Canada he would say emphatically that those conditions are in a state of topsy-turvydom.

THE MALAY JUNGLE

Mr. King is not a member of the new Parliament of Canada. He cannot claim a seat in the House when Parliament meets; but his friends say he will remain at the head of the Government and will lead the Government and the House when Parliament meets for the dispatch of business from a seat in the gallery reserved for "distinguished strangers," just as the manager of a baseball team or of a hockey club directs his players "from the side lines."

THE MALAY JUNGLE

If Mr. Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King does what his supporters say he will do, he will be establishing a new and novel constitutional precedent—he will be doing something that has never been done before and probably never will be done again. With half his Cabinet sharing his mortuary couch he will direct the affairs of the country from the Parliamentary side lines. Consequently, while it would be very interesting to pay a visit to the Malay Jungle for the purpose of observing the natural topsy-turvydom of the conditions down there, it is not necessary for us to go so far from home to find many things that are upside down.

a government, they will not hesitate to kill the head of that government or the head of the state in order to get quit of it. A plot to assassinate the King of Rumania was discovered a few days ago. Man is quite as curious an animal as some of the animals in the Malay jungles described by Mr. Wells.

Warning to Manufacturers

Sir—I read with a good deal of interest the letter of Mr. Newton in your issue of November 12, under the above heading, and I want to follow up with a few remarks of my own.

I know quite well that I must be talking about woolen goods in England, but I cannot talk of Rumania because I was never there. I may say it certainly does one good to see the terrible state of the woolen trade in Rumania made only. I know the British imports are more than her exports today, but she would have to consult the trade and commerce reports to see just how this is made up. Certainly there are no tools, machinery, implements, etc., tabbed made in any other country.

I had this in mind when I returned to Canada and visited a number of stores in Montreal. I saw dozens of the woolen goods in "Made in Germany." Woolen goods in one store were labelled "Made in U.S.A." and the comforting feeling this label brought to me was that some few weeks before, just at the time when I was using every effort and wanted the strongest arguments possible in favor of the woolen trade in Victoria, the Woolen Manufacturers' Association was supplied with a newspaper cutting setting forth in detail the terrible state of the woolen trade in Canada and that since January 1, 1923, more than twenty Canadian woolen mills have closed entirely, etc. The thought arises here, sir, what are we doing in Victoria? Are we buying home products? I don't know how it could be done, but there should be some kind of a constant reminder to the purchasing public that conditions in Victoria would soon change for the better if all would ask for home products and watch to see that they get them. I say, see that you get them. Let me give you an instance of how necessary it is to look more carefully into what we buy. I don't know how it could be done, but there should be some kind of a constant reminder to the purchasing public that conditions in Victoria would soon change for the better if all would ask for home products and watch to see that they get them. I say, see that you get them. Let me give you an instance of how necessary it is to look more carefully into what we buy. We were in Montreal to see the woolen goods in one store were labelled "Made in U.S.A." and the comforting feeling this label brought to me was that some few weeks before, just at the time when I was using every effort and wanted the strongest arguments possible in favor of the woolen trade in Victoria, the Woolen Manufacturers' Association was supplied with a newspaper cutting setting forth in detail the terrible state of the woolen trade in Canada and that since January 1, 1923, more than twenty Canadian woolen mills have closed entirely, etc. The thought arises here, sir, what are we doing in Victoria? Are we buying home products? I don't know how it could be done, but there should be some kind of a constant reminder to the purchasing public that conditions in Victoria would soon change for the better if all would ask for home products and watch to see that they get them. ## Typographical Union Head to Visit Victoria

Mr. James M. Lynch and Other Officials Will Arrive Here on Tour of Inspection on Wednesday

Will Address Rotarians

During the present week one of the outstanding figures in the labor world will pay a visit to Victoria, in the person of James M. Lynch, president of the International Typographical Union. Mr. Lynch, secretary-treasurer, and Mr. Beth H. Brown, first vice-president, will accompany him on his visit here.

At 5:30 p.m. a banquet will be held in honor of the guests, when only those holding invitation cards will be admitted, after which a delightful program and many speeches will be delivered.

On Thursday, Mr. Lynch and accompanying officers, will be the guests of the Rotary Club's luncheon, when Mr. Lynch will be the speaker. The wives of the members of Victoria Typographical Union, No. 261, are decorating the tables and assisting generally to make the event a success.

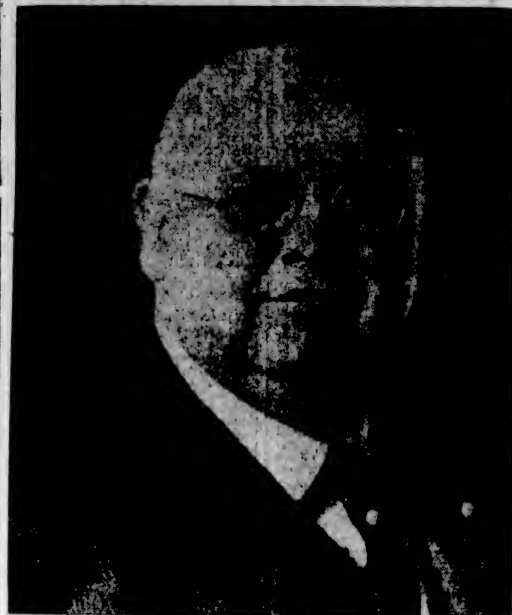

The Salvation Army last evening reported having experienced the most successful tag day in its history, locally, the proceeds for the day amounting to $655.15. With definite opposition from the weather in the morning, and the remembrance of another tag day only a week away, they consider themselves particularly fortunate to have met with such a generous response from the public. Adjutant Fox was in general charge of the tag, and was ably assisted by Adjutant Junker, district commanding officer, and about twenty other members of the local corps. The tag took the form of a little red heart in the centre of which appeared the words: "Have a Heart." The fact that the proceeds are for the assistance of the Salvation Army B.C. Rescue Home was also set forth. This rescue home is in Vancouver, and serves the whole of British Columbia, and yesterday's collection was to meet the Victoria responsibilities, as numbers of cases are sent from this city.

Commissioner Lamb Here on Thursday

Salvation Army Official From England Is in Charge of All S.A. Emigration Work

Two distinguished Salvation Army officers will be in the city this week in the persons of Commissioner and Mrs. Lamb, of London, England. They will arrive here next Thursday, in the course of a world tour, and will address a public meeting in the Salvation Army Citadel the same evening. Commissioner Lamb is one of the world officers of their emigration department. He is always anxious to meet people in any of the places which he visits who either seek information concerning emigration and immigration or who have information to give on the subject. He will be particularly pleased to meet any Old Country people here.

Union Leader Comes Here Soon

MR. JAMES M. LYNCH, OF INDIANAPOLIS

Obituary

POLLARD—The body of the late Mrs. Annie Pollard is resting at Hayward's B.C. Funeral Chapel, where services will be held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The Rev. P. H. Fatt will officiate, and interment will be made in the family plot at Ross Bay Cemetery.

KELMAN—Funeral service for the late Mr. James Kelman will be conducted at Hayward's B.C. Funeral Chapel Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The body will be laid to rest at Ross Bay Cemetery.

ROY—The death took place on November 13 at Prince Rupert of Alexander (Alec) Roy, aged twenty-four years, a native of Perth, Scotland, and a resident of this city for the past twenty-one years. The late Mr. Roy was well known in sporting circles here. He leaves to mourn his loss, besides a host of friends, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Roy, 2615 Forbes Street; four brothers, James, Leonard, of Somers, B.C., and William, of Victoria; three sisters, Mrs. Patterson, of Victoria; Mrs. Mossey, of Frank, Alta.; and Jessie at home. The remains are being forwarded to this city, and funeral arrangements will be made later.

BENNETT—The death took place yesterday morning at St. Joseph's Hospital, beloved wife of James William Bennett, of Mayne Island. The deceased was born in Peterboro, Ontario, fifty-one years ago, and had been a resident of Mayne Island for the last thirty-one years, where she had made many friends who will regret to learn of her death. The late Mrs. Bennett is survived by, besides her husband, four sons, John H. and Frederick J. at home; Clifford A., employed on the Victoria, and William M., employed on the St. Adelaide; four daughters, Misses Lillian, Gertrude and Edith at home and Elsie Bennett, of Victoria; also one nephew, Robert Jack, of this city. The remains are resting at the Sands Funeral Chapel and will be forwarded to Mayne Island on Tuesday, and on Wednesday at 2:30 o'clock, the services will be conducted at St. Mary Magdalene Church, where the Rev. Mr. Porter will officiate. The remains will be laid to rest in the churchyard cemetery.

ERSKINE—The death took place yesterday at the Royal Jubilee Hospital of Ronald Erik Erskine, five-months-old twin son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Erskine, of 1554 Lionel Street. There survive besides his parents, two brothers and four sisters. The funeral will take place on Tuesday, November 17 at 2 o'clock, from the Sands Funeral Chapel, and the remains will be laid to rest in Ross Bay Cemetery.

Lumber Outlook Brightens for Island Mills

Mr. J. H. Bloedel Says More Shingle Operators Will Locate Nearer Stands of Timber

Active Sawmill Building

Opinion appears to be somewhat conflicting with regard to the immediate revival of the lumber industry, in view of the offshoots demand remaining largely influenced by the Japanese market, while the demand for lumber on the prairies is not likely to be large until after the usual stocktakings at the end of the year, after which retail yards will stock up for spring demand. On the other hand, the situation in Florida, owing to the real estate boom, has created an exceptional demand there, and B.C. mills are sharing in the business.

Active Construction
Although some of the small mills burned this summer have not yet begun rebuilding, sawmill construction and extension is active in preparation for future business. From this standpoint the year 1925 is likely to be an important one, with the opening of two large mills and the possible completion of a third.

Victorians Are Buying Victoria-Made Furnaces

Nor is the reason hard to find. Albion Victoria-Made Furnaces are honestly constructed, and the prices represent one hundred cents of real value for every dollar spent.

ALBION STOVE WORKS, LTD.
2101 Government St. (Cor. Pembroke St.) Phone 91

While there has been considerable development in connection with the shingle mill accommodation on the island recently and another shingle mill is now under construction here for the McMaster-Horton Cedar Manufacturing Company, which is to be ready for operation by December 1, one of the leading Washington authorities comes out with an announcement of great interest.

Expert's View
Mr. J. H. Bloedel, of the firm of Bloedel, Stewart & Welch Corporation, who is now in British Columbia looking over his connections on this side of the line, declares that this Province is the last big stand of the shingle industry and that Washington and Oregon shinglers will bring their connections over here in increasing numbers. Mr. Bloedel maintains that the red cedar shingle is replacing the patent roofing materials as a suitable commodity among those who desire beautiful homes.

In view of the fact that Mr. Bloedel is largely interested in logging operations on the island and also in the Great Central Lake sawmills, now under construction, his views are of special interest to the island. He maintains that the cedar operators across the line, who are being forced farther away from good stands of cedar, must eventually come north to be near their sources of supply.

The reopening during the present year of dormant mills on the island would seem to point a strong argument for the development of this branch of the forest products industry.

Representatives from public bodies will attend, and citizens interested are invited.

Girls' Branch Sale—The girls' branch of the Women's Auxiliary of St. Mary's Church, Oak Bay, held a very successful sale of work yesterday afternoon. The affair, opened by Miss Agnew, who was introduced by the rector, cleared over $50 and showed the girls to be excellent workers and enthusiastic saleswomen.

Dr. Kenning to Speak—Dr. Gordon Kenning will speak at tomorrow's luncheon of the Kiwanis Club at noon in the Chamber of Commerce on "My Impression of the Panama Canal Zone." Mr. Handley Wells will be the soloist. The big Kiwanis revel and dance will be held tomorrow night in the Alexander ballroom, commencing at 8:30 o'clock.

First Annual Dance—The Canadian Society of Certified Steam Engineers, Bayview, Filles and Mill Mechanics will hold its first annual dance Tuesday at the Alexandra ballroom. Hunt's orchestra has been hired for the occasion and the latest dance music will be rendered. Buffet supper will be served free. The dance promises to be a huge success.

Sermon on Decision—Attention is drawn to the special meeting for men to be addressed by Archdeacon Laycock at 8:30 this afternoon in connection with the mission of service now in progress at the Garrison Church of St. Paul's. The concluding service today are at the usual hours. The mission will speak at each service, the subject of the sermon at evening being "Decision."

Lecture on Evolution—A lecture entitled "The Modern Theory of Evolution" will be given in the lecture room of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Monday evening at 8 o'clock, under the auspices of the Young People's Society. The lecture will be delivered by Dr. Hills, late of Manitoba College of Law. Dr. Hills comes well recommended as a lecturer, and the fact that evolution is a much talked of subject today will make this a very interesting and instructive lecture. All are invited to attend.

Order for Toldno—The local Red Cross workshop has recently received a commission for the manufacture of a sanctuary chair, a credence table and a prayer desk. These articles are the gift of an anonymous donor to the church at Toldno, of which Rev. Mr. Munson is rector, and will prove a very welcome addition to the furnishings of the little church out on the West Coast. Mr. Munson was among the passengers on the St. Maquina when she sailed from here a few days ago, having returned to his home at Toldno after sick leave.

Visit Textile Works—Mr. B. C. Routley, principal of the McKenzie Avenue School in Nanaimo, and a class of girls, last Saturday paid a visit to the Victoria Textile Works on Government Street. The girls were extremely interested in the masts, scarves and socks which were being made, and which are for sale. The management will be pleased to demonstrate the work to any who are interested in the business.

Masonic Lodge Dance—The arrangements for the holding of the 33rd anniversary dance, under the auspices of the Victoria Lodge, No. 24, A.F. & A.M., on Friday, November 20, in the Alexandra ballroom, have now been completed by the committee, and the tickets are selling rapidly. As the number to be sold is strictly limited, members of the order and their friends are advised to obtain same without delay. These may be procured from the members of the lodge. Mr. Oard has selected some of his best items for his orchestra. Tables have been arranged for those who may wish to play cards.

Royal Society of St. George—The Royal Society of St. George will have as its guests of honor at its semi-monthly meeting Tuesday, the "Pride of the Island" Branch of the Sons of England. A minstrel troupe consisting of twenty performers, will provide the entertainment of the evening. In addition there will be an informal dance, with a seven-piece orchestra in attendance. Owing to the large attendance expected and very full programme, refreshments will be dispensed with on this occasion. The meeting will be held in the Conservative Club rooms, Campbell Building, and will commence at 8 o'clock. The president, Dean C. S. Quinlan, will preside.

Volcanoes of Vancouver Island—Rev. Robert Connell is to lecture tomorrow evening at the meeting of the Victoria Centre of the Royal Astronomical Society to be held at Victoria College. His subject will be "Ancient Volcanoes of Southern Vancouver Island," and will be illustrated by lantern slides. In the course of his lecture Mr. Connell, who is a well-known authority on the geology of the district, will speak particularly of the Sooke and Matchless districts, which he knows from personal observation, and will tell about the types of volcanic action and their products; the earliest known volcanic activity on Vancouver Island, and the three evidences of volcanic eruptions of tertiary date in the southwestern corner; explosive accumulations, lava outpourings, and dykes and sills.

Home Economics Prize—A prize of $50 is offered by the Women's Canadian Club to the Home Economics class of sixteen which succeeds in putting on the best exhibit of needlecraft and showing the best marks in study of nutrition. The judges appointed are Mrs. Farr, Mrs. Elliott, Mrs. Bradshaw (representing the Women's Canadian Club), and Mrs. Winster, late of Manitoba College. Of the total sum $30 is to be used to purchase a silver teapot which will be for annual competition between grade VIII classes in earnest-making, the winning class to hold the prize for one year. The rest of the money will be given in four prizes of $5 each to the individual pupils making the best marks in nutrition. Mrs. Peter McNaughton read the conditions of the award at the regular meeting of the Women's Canadian Club on Friday.

City Sights Fail To Thrill Eskimos

Natives From Far North to Winter in Ontario—Cannot Return Home

MONTREAL, Nov. 14.—After seeing all the sights of a modern city, the four young Eskimo seamen who manned the Jean Revillon, an Arctic fur trading schooner, when she was brought to Liverpool, N.S., for repairs, are apparently not thrilled. The only thing that modern man likes to which they have become partial is tobacco, for they smoke continually. Tonight they will leave for Pagwa, Ont., where they will remain for the winter. It will be impossible to send the boat north before spring, so they are being kept at Pagwa until an opportunity occurs in the spring to take them overland to their home at Baker Lake.

Colorado to Resist Second Blasphemy Trial

DENVER, Nov. 14.—The state will resist efforts of attorneys for Dr. Harold E. Blazer to bring about a retrial of the aged country physician on a charge of murdering his thirty-four-year-old "child-woman" daughter, Hazel. Joel E. Stone, prosecutor of the trial, which ended with a deadlocked jury and subsequent dismissal of the murder charge against Dr. Blazer, announced tonight he would fight all attempts to retry the case and "place Colorado in the position of legalizing the character of crime."

No New Proposals Made

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—The Treasury has today no new proposals to Paris in connection with the negotiations for funding the French debt to the United States. Under Secretary Winston declared tonight that negotiations were still open but that no new steps had been taken by the American debt commission.

She—Three years.

CORNS AND CALLUSES

Lift Off with Fingers

"Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little 'Freezone' on any aching corn, callus, or 'hard skin' on bottom of feet. Instantly it stops hurting, then shortly you're right off with fingers. Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of 'Freezone' for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the foot callused, without soreness or irritation." (Adv.)

Wedding Reception

The wedding reception of Mr. and Mrs. George Hamid Ford was held at the Civil Service rooms on Wednesday, about two hundred guests attending. The reception-rooms were artistically decorated with ribbons, cut flowers, palms and evergreens, the principal colors being pink and mauve. The beautiful three-tier wedding cake was placed on a pedestal in the centre of the large room, and there cut by the bride and bridegroom during the evening. A buffet supper was served under the care of Mrs. Alfred Jacklin and the Misses Lily Wilson, Mona Jilch and Mary Samuelsen. The young couple were the recipients of a vast number of handsome and useful presents, including those from the staffs of the E. & N. and Provincial Buildings, Messrs. H. Woods and Arthur Partington during the evening rendered vocal solos, the music being supplied by Sanders' orchestra, their offerings being received with great applause. Miss Hamid was the accompanist for the evening. The guests were received by the bride, Mrs. C. W. Sanders, McNeil, Kenny, S. Smith, W. Blane, W. H. Hadley, N. O. Ford, Davidson, Horder, A. Jacklin, A. Tripp, Ch. Hopper, Edwardson, R. Woods, G. Englewood, Don Smith, W. Handley, M. Cusner, Bob Owens, A. Anderson, Mrs. Cave, Mrs. Anderson, F. Webb, Marston, Jenns, Jennings.

Say it with photographs this Christmas.

What Vancouver Island Women's Institutes Are Doing

Parksville, B. C.

A combined meeting of the Parksville and Qualicum Beach Institutes was held at Qualicum Beach November 4 at 2:30 p.m., to hear Mrs. Frank Campbell, of Victoria, speak on legislation, eighty-five members being present. The Parksville members were conveyed by those who had cars. Mrs. H. K. Harrison was asked to take the chair, and as president of the senior institute, she spoke a few words of welcome.

Mrs. Playfair, secretary, read the Qualicum Beach minutes and letters from various sources relating to local needs, which called for discussions. One regarding the Bible being read in schools brought out suggestions, and Mrs. Campbell suggested writing to Mr. Willis, superintendent of education, for advice. Mrs. Luff (Coombs) made the motion in the form of a resolution, in which Parkville joined Qualicum Beach.

Mrs. G. M. Bernard, acting secretary, read the minutes of the Parkville meeting and those of the meeting held in Errington last month. Mrs. Robert Taylor, convener of the transportation committee, reported that two new members would join the institute.

Novelty Dance

The All-Hallow's Eve novelty dance under the auspices of the Parkville Women's Institute was a great success, $48 being added to the treasury. The parish hall was gaily decorated with streamers, cats and witches, giving a pretty effect. Fancy baskets were sold and a large box of home-made candy was raffled. The weight of a huge cabbage was correctly guessed by a small boy of ten. At midnight the festivities closed, everyone being satisfied with the dance.

Cobble Hill

CORBLE HILL, Nov. 14.—The monthly meeting of the Cobble Hill Women's Institute was held Thursday afternoon in the hall, Mrs. Barry, president, in the chair. It was decided to hold a barn dance on December 3 in aid of the Solarium, and a committee was formed which consisted of Mrs. T. B. Barry, Mrs. Lafortune, Mrs. J. Lafortune, Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. McPherson and Mrs. Wace. Charlie Hunt's orchestra will supply the music. The committee for the masquerade dance November 30 is as follows: Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. T. P. Barry, Mrs. Horrocks, Mrs. McPherson, Mrs. Lafortune and Mrs. J. Lafortune. Music will be supplied by the Barry-Owen orchestra. It was unanimously resolved that the Women's Institute is in favor of a fair being held next year.

A resolution recently passed by the directors of the Cobble Hill Agricultural Association and the Shawigan Farmers' Institute protesting against the proposed discontinuance of the Government grant in aid of small dairies, was endorsed. Mrs. McMillan was requested to write to the Duncan, Vimy and Shawigan Women's Institutes asking for their co-operation in this matter. The business for the afternoon were Mrs. Cearley and Mrs. Horrocks.

Strawberry Vale

Strawberry Vale Women's Institute held a successful box social, in Strawberry Vale Hall, Friday evening, when a large sum was realized by means of auctioning boxes of refreshments which had entitled the holder to admission to the event. Mr. Ogden proved a capable auctioneer. The proceeds are for the distribution of Christmas cheer to needy cases in the district. Mr. H. H. Fringle acted as chairman, and Mr. J. Cheatham gave an interesting little talk on the "Star-tard Puppi." A delightful programme was given by the following: Piano solo, Miss May King; Dutch daisies, Miss B. Betty Claire; recitation, Miss Gladys Davis; solo, Mr. Mark King; duet, Miss M. King and Mr. Maurice Foster. In addition to the Christmas boxes, delicious refreshments were served by a committee of institute ladies.

Card Party

The regular fortnightly card party under the auspices of the Strawberry Vale Women's Institute, will be held in Strawberry Vale Hall, Tuesday evening, November 17, at 8 o'clock. Good prizes will be given and refreshments served at close of play.

Concert for T.B. Ward

A most enjoyable concert was arranged last Thursday evening for the patients in the T.B. ward of the Jubilee Hospital. Dainty refreshments brought the evening to a close.

Returns to Shawigan Lake

Miss Mordon has returned to Shawigan Lake after spending a few days in the city as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Fraser, Simcoe Street.

Bishop at Comox

Rev. C. de V. Schofield, Bishop of Columbia, left on Friday for Comox, where he is paying a visitation. He is expected back tomorrow night.

Bridge Party

Mr. and Mrs. Noble W. Pirie were hosts at a most enjoyable bridge party on Friday evening, at their home on Blenkinsop Road, Lake Hill.

Dangerously Ill

Inquiries last evening elicited the information that Dr. H. L. Fraser had passed a fairly comfortable day, although he is still dangerously ill.

Leaving Shortly for Mainland

Miss Victoria Phipps, Elford Street, expects to leave for Vancouver on November 20, when she will be the guest of Mrs. J. M. Lay.

Card Party

The weekly card party will be held in the Strawberry Vale Hall on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. There will be good prizes and refreshments.

To Hold Dance

Sons of St. George are holding a dance on Wednesday at the K. of P. Hall, from 8 till 1 o'clock. There will be a four-piece orchestra.

Dinner Party

Mrs. Armstrong, York Place, was hostess at a ladies' dinner party last night, followed by two tables of bridge.

Party for Daughter

Mr. H. Puckle, Richmond Avenue, entertained with three tables of mah jong yesterday afternoon for her youngest daughter, Doris.

Guest in City

Mrs. H. J. Brice, of Earl Grey, Saskatchewan, is a guest in the city for a few days, and is staying at the Y.W.C.A.

Mah Jong Party

Mrs. W. C. Todd, "Willmar," St. Charles Street, was hostess at a small mah jong party yesterday afternoon.

The Young Idea in fashion takes to the circular skirt, long, close sleeve and small collar.

Only by a matter of a very few inches in the skirt length does the fared frock of the Junior differ from the silhouette adopted by an older but no wiser generation. In navy blue (with the narrow braided collar, cuffs and belt of scarlet twill, the dress is very smart for school. For Sunday and afternoon, Canton crepe or flat crepe are very nice, trimmed with the same material in a contrasting color, with the matching braided matching the frock. Tulle and radium lace smartly in the circular skirt and are usually trimmed with plaid silk.

Good Reports Given at Y.W.C.A. Board Meeting

The monthly meeting of the Board of directors of the Y.W.C.A. was held Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock, when the report of the Y.W.C.A. was presented by Mrs. Frank Adams in connection with the World's Week of Prayer. Highly satisfactory reports were given by all committees. The Travelers' Aid Committee reported that 186 hosts and sixty-four trains were met during the month, forty people assisted and special cases noted. Fifty memberships were received, and the receipts of the recent sale of work amounted to $103. The report for the Y.W.C.A. classes was exceptionally good, all classes being full and having progressed well. It was also made known that arrangements are already under way for new classes to be formulated after Christmas, while plans are in hand for a Y.W.C.A. picnic, which has been proposed to take place some time in January.

Joy Club of Y.W.C.A. Open to Little Girls

The Joy Club is an aspect of the Young Women's Christian Association that is less known than many others, but scarcely less interesting, since the age limit of its members is twelve years, and the youngest members are nine years of age. The club meets every Saturday and the programme includes singing and games, and the subject has been particularly chosen for the purpose of instilling into the children an understanding and love of household art.

The club was formed three years ago and has a pretty motto, the initial letters of which spell the name of the club. It is: "Jesus first, Others second, Yourself last."

The leaders are senior C.G.I.T. girls, Miss Helen Green and Miss Winifred (Liquor); the president Miss Rosalie Durrant, and the secretary Miss Eugenie Cantwell.

Weddings

Jones-Tate
The marriage of Miss Doris Tate, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Tate, 519 Hereward Road, and Mr. Edwin Jones, third son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Jones, of Toronto, was solemnized on Thursday evening at the residence of Rev. Mr. Scott, pastor of the Wesley Methodist Church. The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in her wedding dress of white silk, embroidered in pearls. The hand-embroidered tulle veil was caught to the head with a coronet of orange blossoms. Her shoes were of pale pink roses and carnations. Miss Lily Cromack was maid of honor, gowning in henna flat crepe, with a band of gold leaves and red and white flowers in her hair. She carried an arm bouquet of pale pink carnations. The brother of the bride, Mr. Leslie Tate, was best man. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride. The refreshment table was daintily decorated in pale pink and white and was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake. Assisting at the reception were: Mrs. Wiggs, Mrs. Hinchcliffe, Mrs. Cromack, Mrs. Crosson, Mrs. Whaley, Mrs. Temple, Mrs. Quintance and Mrs. Watt. Mrs. Tate, handsomely gowning in olive green silk, assisted the young couple in receiving their numerous guests. The bride presented the groom with a solid gold watch and chain. To the bride the groom gave a strand of pearls; to the maid of honor a gold ring. The bride and groom left for their honeymoon at 10 o'clock. The bride and groom were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Chastell, Dr. Drye Street, Oak Bay. Dr. Clem Davies officiated at the service. A reception took place later in the evening, when a host of friends of the young couple were present to wish them every happiness. Mr. and Mrs. Chastell motored to Parksville, where the honeymoon will be spent.

Prudence Says So

Beginning with soup—and ending with a delicious lemon filling—A few specialties gathered from here and there.

"How ever good, how ever bad, depends on how you make it." This is indeed a true saying, as has been proved time and time again by cooks all over the world. And speaking of cooks, Prudence came across some lines of Owen Meredith which show how valuable the members of the culinary profession are to the community. They run as follows:

"We may live without poetry, music and art;
We may live without conscience, and live without heart;
We may live without friends; we may live without books;
But civilized man cannot live without cooks."

So let us look to our victuals and begin with soup.

Creasy Soup
Ten nice fresh carrots cut in pieces with one onion, and one leek put in a stew pan with a little butter, cover and let simmer for an hour over a slow fire. When quite soft pour by degrees three pints of hot water or some stock, add pepper, salt and a little bacon rind, and let the whole boil so that it makes a thickish purée. Pass it through a sieve, pour back into the saucepan with a bit of butter and let it come to the boil. Serve with croutons of toast.

Oyster Patties
This is a delicious filling for oyster patties. Cook together a tablespoon of butter and one of flour, when they bubble add a gill of oyster liquor with a (teaspoon of cream or milk), to which a pinch of soda has been added. Stir until smooth and thick, and drop in one pint of oysters. Cook until the edges curl. Remove from the fire and add the beaten yolk of an egg. When cold fill the pastry shells and bake until hot through.

Oyster Omelette
Make an omelette with three eggs, three tablespoons of boiling water or cold milk, which ever you prefer, pepper and salt to taste. Beat the whites and yolks separately, add the oysters which have been blanched and bearded, then add the stiffly beaten whites of eggs and fry all together until brown.

Cotelettes Au Fromage
This is rather an unusual and very tasty dish. A quarter of a pound of grated cheese, two ounces of butter, two eggs, a little mustard and cayenne. Pound all the ingredients together, make up in the shape of a cutlet and fry in hot fat. Serve with toast in strips.

Green Tomato Chutney
Pare, core and slice fifteen tart apples. Chop separately an equal number of green tomatoes, two onions, one pound of seeded raisins. Mix all together in a stone jar; add three cups of sugar, three of vinegar, half a cup of lemon juice, three tablespoons salt, one heaping tablespoon of ginger and one teaspoon cayenne. Let it stand overnight, then let it simmer thoroughly and slowly for two hours, stirring constantly. Seal in fruit jars.

Gingerbread
Two eggs, three-quarters of a cup butter (or part dripping), one cup molasses, one brown sugar, one and a half tablespoons ginger, one teaspoon soda, three cups flour, one cup boiling water at the last. Mix in the following order: Butter, sugar, eggs, ginger, flour, soda and water. Bake in a moderate oven.

Good Leaf Cake
This is a dark leaf cake, the "kind he likes," to misquote a well-known caption. The ingredients are half a cup sugar, half a cup molasses, half a cup butter, two eggs, half a cup milk, one cup raisins, one cup flour, one and a half teaspoons baking powder, spices to taste.

Steamed Pudding
This is an economical and good pudding for a cold day. One cup of chopped suet, one cup sugar, one cup flour, one cup currants, one cup raisins, two cups breadcrumbs, one cup sour milk one teaspoon soda and one teaspoon spice. Steam for two hours.

Lemon Filling
Before finishing for today may I add this filling for lemon cheese cakes, which I assure you is quite delicious. Three eggs (leave out one white), a quarter of a pound of sugar, a quarter of a pound of butter, the rind and juice of one lemon. Mix the sugar, butter and lemon together, add the eggs. Stir in a double boiler until it thickens.

Fashions and Foibles

By Shirley Shaw

A French frock of black satin introduces a note of daring color in the godet flare at the side and the embroidery at the hip.

A Paris frock of exquisite and distinguished simplicity is made of very lustrous and supple black satin, and is plain in back and draped in a surplice effect in front. Its challenging note is the flared godet of vivid cerise crepe de Chine at the side, set in under folds of gilt and cerise metal cloth. The flowers at the hip are made of crepe de Chine with the leaves of changeable green and silver tissue. Cyclamen-colored crepe satin with the godet in a deep, clear blue and the metallic cloth shot with blue would make a very lovely frock.

Victoria Artists Are Appreciated at Duncan

A Victoria artist, Mrs. Eva Baird, was the subject of a complimentary reference in the last issue of The Cowichan Leader, which, reviewing the orchestral concert given there recently under the direction of Mr. Willett, said:

"The excellence of the concert was augmented by the very fine vocal selections of Mrs. Eva Baird, Victoria, who recently returned from a period of study in Europe. She completely captivated her audience, her offerings being enthusiastically received. Mrs. Baird gave a most artistic rendering of her songs, and that her technique was appreciated was very evident. She emphasized the proper interpretation of each number rather than the mere display of her wonderful voice, which is of great beauty and wide range. Her light songs were very well given and withal she has an excellent stage presence. She was exceptionally well accompanied by Mrs. A. J. Gibson, of Victoria."

NEWS OF THE SPORTING WORLD

Mickey Ion Will Handle Whistle In Western Circuit This Season

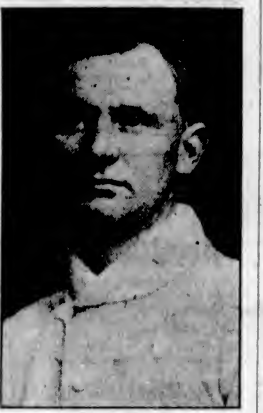

One of Best Arbiters Sport Has Produced Likely to Work Mostly in Coast Towns, With Battell on Prairies—Laurie Burnell to Train Cougars Again

Mickey Ion, recognized as the most efficient referee that ever performed on a hockey arena in Western Canada, and undoubtedly one of the best arbiters in the sport, has been reappointed to his official post as a referee on the Western Hockey League. Hockey fans are assured that the contests which he handles will be capably refereed.

Ion's reappointment this year probably means that he will work mainly the three coast cities in the loop, Victoria, Vancouver and Portland, with Cliff Battell officiating in the prairie towns of Calgary, Saskatoon and Edmonton.

Although subject to criticism at many times, and by many fans, and it would really be difficult to find an arbiters whose work met with universal approval and pleased even the least critical, Fred "Mickey" Ion stands today as a leader among hockey referees. His reputation as a referee of the highest standard is well known all over Canada, and in many American centres.

The White-Haired Boy
Quite a few coast fans, several years ago, did not apparently appreciate Mickey's worth until Prairie referees came to the coast and handled several games in Victoria and Vancouver. Even those who were the most reluctant to give credit to Ion, were pleading for his return, and when he got back from a hunt around the Prairie cities, maybe he wasn't the white-haired boy with the island and mainland railbirds. And, incidentally, when Mickey is

Carpet Bowling League Starts

Season Inaugurated With Fitting Ceremony—Saanich Team Beats St. Mark's

There was a good attendance to witness the opening game in the Carpet Bowling League Friday evening at the Burnside Centre. Several ladies also inspected the new game and before long we were hearing of a ladies' club being formed.

The president made a few fitting remarks, and afterwards engaged the vice-president in the first match on the schedule.

To Mr. John Peterson, a much esteemed member of the Victoria and Burnside Bowling Clubs, fell the honor of delivering the first ball played under the auspices of the league.

The visitors took much interest in the game and applauded any display of the fine touches of the play.

At the twentieth end St. Mark's had a decided lead, but the Saanich men refused to be taken off their feet.

The score was tied at thirteen all, and the standing at the finish of twenty-one ends was St. Mark's 14, Saanich 19.

Saanich—John Peterson, J. P. Hibben, G. Plimer, Geo. Wallace (president), 19.

St. Mark's—E. H. Fisher, W. Kirchin, C. A. Goodwin, Rev. H. V. Hitchcock (vice-president), 14.

Members Wanted to Join Skating Club

Some of the members of the skating club have been discussing the prospects of reviving its activities for the coming season, providing arrangements can be made for the use of the arena.

In former years the rink was reserved for the use of the club one evening each week. Sometimes sessions during the day were also arranged.

Before going further it will be necessary to be assured of an enrolment of at least 100 members at a fee of twelve dollars for the season, covering approximately the months of December, January and February. No special degree of skill in skating is required to qualify for membership.

Ladies or gentlemen who are willing to join or who would like further information are asked to communicate with the acting honorary secretary, Mr. T. J. Goodwin, 1008 Broad Street, or with Mr. W. M. Hotham, 415 Pemberton Building.

Filling the Bill

THE manager of the First Presbyterian Falcons is trying to bring together the ladies' teams from the Victoria College and the Normal School for the preliminary game that will precede the Falcon-Spalding game on Friday evening, November 28. If this game can be arranged, then the local fans will be able to sit in on two first-class hoop tussles.

Washington Win Football Game From Berkeley

Score Is 7-0 With Victory Coming With Dramatic Suddenness Near Close of Scoreless Struggle

80,000 Witness Struggle

CALIFORNIA STADIUM, Berkeley, Nov. 14.—A pack of husks from the fir forests of the North invaded the Brown Hills of Berkeley this afternoon and drove the great golden bear from his lair. Leaving the bruin's carcass behind them, they entered the final stretch of the twisted trail to Camp Title. The score was seven to nothing.

The Washington Huskies thrust aside the most confident championship aspirations of the California Bears by a single touchdown, which came with two and a half minutes left to play, when Elmer Teraue, the northland captain, took the ball, suddenly reversed his field and ran twenty yards untouched. Sherman kicked the goal.

The game was an epic that held 80,000 persons spellbound through a clear, Autumnal afternoon. Several thousand Washington "Alums" and their friends hurled hats into the air, and jumped up and down in a frenzy when the touchdown came that meant the first Husky victory over California in six years.

The Washington victory came with dramatic suddenness. While honors were fairly even in the first half, California had the best of the entire third quarter and the first part of the fourth. George Wilson, great Husky halfback, had given his all, which means that he carried the ball most of the time and backed up his team on defence. Several times he had been helped from the field weeping at his luck, and protesting mutely. L. Teraue had replaced him and tore out some yards, when his brother Elmer began to play like a main power. A ten-yard smash off tackle preceded his thrilling dash for the touchdown.

Football Coach May Buy Baseball Club

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 14.—The San Francisco Bulletin says today that Andrew Smith, head football coach at the University of California, and W. W. Whitcomb, Berkeley, real estate man, are negotiating for the purchase of the Oakland club in the Pacific Coast Baseball League. Smith, The Bulletin says, will resign his present position to take the event of the deal's success. The supposed price is $300,000.

Bellingham Normals Defeat B.C. Varsity

BELLINGHAM, Wash., Nov. 14.—Rugby tactics were ineffective against the Bellingham Normal School's forty and experienced back, and the University of British Columbia was beaten today, 46 to 6.

The feature of the game was the comeback of the Canadians, who figured out between halves how to spread the line on defence and run interference for the ball carrier. "With nearly all the players in the Normal line-up the visitors held well and Cullen tied pulled off several spectacular runs to get the ball to the one-yard line, from where he plunged over for the visitors' score.

Normal came back and by recovering several fumbles, scored twice more before the game ended.

Sunday School Basketball

First Presbyterian Boys Beat Christ Church 24 to 16—Axioms Girls Win by 18 to 3

In one of the best boys' basketball games ever staged in the Memorial Hall, the First Presbyterian Boys last night needed out the fast Christ Church boys by 24-16. The gallery was packed with spectators and at times the excitement grew so tense that Referee Hockings had difficulty in making the players hear the whistle. The game throughout was fast and furious with plenty of hard checking and combination.

The Christ Church boys went into the game favorites and played remarkably well in the first half which ended 12-1 in their favor. However, the Greys came back with a rush and ran their opponents off their feet.

Time after time Cudlip, of the Greys, broke away and scored and by the end of the game he had a grand total of sixteen points to his credit. Bissell did some fine dribbling and shooting, but the First Presbyterian guards kept a close tally on him. However, he managed to slip away and score eleven points. For the winners, Webster, at guard, and Cudlip were the stars, but every player played a fine game. Bissell and Christie were the outstanding players for the losers and were a constant menace to their opponents' guards. "Bud" Hockings refereed, and the teams were: Greys, Webster, Skillings (6), Killick (2), Cudlip (16), Le Marquand (1), Peden, Acres.

Christ Church, Bissell (11), Christie (4), Hume, Johnson, Jackson, Dickinson, MacAllister (1).

True to Form
The intermediate girls' game ran true to form with the Axioms defeating the Met girls by the score of 18-3. At half-time the score was 10-3. In the final period the Axioms increased their lead to 18 points, while their opponents were held scoreless.

As a team the Axioms played well together and pulled off some nice combinations. Bill Erickson handled this game, and the teams were: Axioms—K. Forbes (1), M. Briggs (5), H. Ryan (1), D. Watson and M. Wilson.

Met—L. Leatham, E. Leatham, E. Wilson, P. Barber, E. Watson, E. Pickard, V. Pettit.

An exhibition game was staged between St. Andrew's senior men and the Sons of England. The Saints were easily the better team and deserved the win. At half-time the score was 14-4 in the church lads favor, and by the final whistle they were only leading by six points, the score board reading: Saints 24, Sons of England 30. The teams were as follows:

Sons—Bull, Logan, Green, Parfitt, H. Parfitt and F. Wright.

Saints—Erickson, Squires, Wood, Smith, Muir, Dettin.

ACTOR OR FIGHTER?

Oak Bay "Oaks" Win Second Game Of Season From United Services

Twelve to Eight Final Score in Fast Game at Willows Grounds—Services' First Appearance Shows Willing Players, But Lack of Experience

The Oak Bay "Oaks" rugby fifteen won their second victory of the season yesterday afternoon at the Willows ground when they defeated the representatives of the United Services by a score of 12 to 8. The match was fast throughout, and the fair crowd was treated to a fine exhibition of rugby.

The victory of the "Oaks" yesterday gives them a two-game lead in the league, and puts them in a comfortable position in the first half of the schedule.

Oak Bay held a lead of six points over the Services at the end of the first half. In the second half the combined forces were within one point of the "Oaks," but in the closing minutes they weakened and let the Oaks get over again to give them a four-point lead.

Heavy Forward Line
The Services yesterday, considering it was their initial appearance of the season, played good rugby. Their pack is considerably heavier than either the J.B.A.A. or "Oaks," but they have quite a lot to learn about the game. Several times during the fray their inexperienced players caused penalties which severely handicapped them, and ultimately cost them the game.

The three-quarter line, though comprised of speedy players, also lacks experience. When they take the ball they do not go in a straight line, but they cut across the field, and yesterday at times lost considerable ground by their attempts to carry the ball across the field.

The over-experienced "Oaks" took every advantage of their opponents' errors, and three of their points resulted from an infringement of the rules by one of the Services men while in possession of the ball. Several other attempts were made to add points by means of penalty kicks, but all failed. Twice during the game the Services looked desperate, and the situations were improved for the "Oaks" by means of free-kicks against the combined forces.

Scrum Rules Worry
The Services in the scrum seemed to worry some of the Services players, and several penalties were given against them for this infraction of the rules. The penalties of the English Rugby Union's scrum rules are so complicated that they are a source of uncertainty, and are as follows:

"A player shall be considered as wilfully preventing a ball being fairly put into the scrum if he touches the ball fairly in the scrum; (a) 'He moves either of his feet beyond the front line of his forward pack; (b) 'Follows the ball into the scrum; (c) 'Takes feet off the ground before the ball has properly entered the scrum.

The Services opened the game with an attack on the "Oaks" line. Grant, on a solo run, succeeded in getting within a few feet of the mark, but he was brought down with a hard tackle by McIntyre. Following a general scrimmage, the Oaks slowly pushed their back, and after some short three-quarter runs, took up the attack in the Services territory.

Two penalty kicks were awarded the "Oaks" for "feet up" in the scrum. "Cotton" Brynjolfsson tried to place both, but failed each time. Another penalty for an off-side gave the "Oaks" their first score. "Cotton" Brynjolfsson took the kick just on the Service twenty-five yard line and converted beautifully.

Following the kick-off John Shaw gathered the ball in with one hand and a pass from Walter Brynjolfsson crossed the line near the edge.

Wests Go Behind in Combination Cup Soccer; Others Remain in Tie

James Island Accounts for Famous Greenhirts by Four to Three—Games on Local Grounds Terribly One-Sided—Services and Esquimalt Win

The United Services and Esquimalt are still tied in the race for the Combination Cup soccer series by virtue of their victories yesterday. The former club handed the Victoria United a licking by eleven goals to nil, while the Dockers trounced the Sons of England by six to nothing. The Wests, who were tied with these clubs for the premier berth in the series, fell by the wayside at the hands of the James Island eleven by a four to three score, and consequently must step down to second place.

The James Island football eleven tasted the fruits of victory for the first time this season when they handed the Victoria Wests a four to three defeat at James Island. The Wests were minus Cohen, Thomas and Waddington, and their absence was keenly felt by the hard-fighting Greenhirts. At the conclusion of the first half the score sheet read one nil, but in the second stanza the home eleven added the extra tally that spelt their first victory of the season, when they scored three to the Wests' two.

Play in the first half was very keen and the teams set a fast pace. Both net custodians were tested with hot shots which resulted in a tally for each team. In the second half the Wests jumped into the lead when Mulcahy scored with a nice shot. This lead was short-lived and ten minutes later the teams were even terms. Still on the offensive the home eleven attacked the Wests' citadel with a vengeance, and "Bob" Whyte was called upon to make some good saves. With about twenty minutes to go the Island boys jumped into the lead when their index left scored at close range. From this point the Wests carried the play to the opposing end of the field, but to no material advantage. Returning the play to the Wests' end of the field the home eleven made it four to two when Goldie scored. Five minutes remained to be played, and this found the Wests fighting hard to try and even things up. But time would not permit, the best they could do was to register one goal, this came from Butler's boot. The final whistle sounded with the James Island eleven being credited with their first victory in local soccer circles. MacMillan refereed.

Esquimalt Win
The Esquimalt soccer team added another victory to its credit yesterday afternoon when the Sons of England were downed to defeat by a score of six to nil. The game was played at Beacon Hill. Good work on the part of the goalkeeper for the winners on several occasions prevented the possibility of the Sons tallying.

Esquimalt opened with very aggressive playing, which was made more effective owing to the fact that the other side was playing off full-back short for a little time. It was not until well into the first half, however, that three goals were taken by the winners. Tom Watt had the credit for the first one, followed a little later by Warren, scoring, and before half-time Tapley put the ball between the posts following a corner kick.

In the second half, play had not long been in progress when Stewart kicked the ball past the goal. This he repeated a little later and before the game closed Johnnie Watt scored a goal.

The teams lined up as follows: Esquimalt—Nicol; J. Watt and Mesher; Hosmer, Tapley and Hay; Stewart, Johnnie Watt, Tom Watt, Warren and Davis.

Almost a Dozen
Seven goals from the toe of Coulter's boot greatly assisted the United Services soccer eleven in handling the Victoria United on eleven to nil defeat at Central Park yesterday in a Combination Cup fixture. The United started the game with eight up and after twenty minutes of play had passed into the beyond they managed to get another man, and with nine men against eleven the soccer battle continued. It seemed to be a matter of the winners scoring at their leisure and the fans who would their way to the park soon became bored.

Amateur Ice Hockey Meeting Tomorrow

THE annual meeting of the Victoria Ice Hockey League will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the Chamber of Commerce. Officers for the year will be elected, and prospects for the coming season discussed. Anybody interested is invited to attend.

with the exhibition. Roberts opened the scoring in the first few minutes of the game, only to be followed almost immediately after with Coulter's first goal. The same player made it three a few minutes later. Cummings, the first to take the right of the Service Club, made it four, after a short period of play. To this score Coulter added three before the half-time whistle sounded. With the sounding of the whistle the score read seven to nil in favor of the Service men.

City Basketball League to Start Action Monday Night at Armories

Three Good Games Arranged to Open Activities for Season's Campaign—Full Schedule of Fixtures Is Drawn for Balance of Week

The Victoria Basketball League will swing into action tomorrow evening at the Bay Street Armories, when three first class basketball games will be staged. This year the league has affiliated with the B.C. Basketball Association so that the winners of the Ladies' Senior A and the Men's Senior A class will have a chance at the B.C. and probably the Dominion championships at the end of this season. Every team is out to win some of the silverware so that some very fine games are anticipated for this coming winter. Another improving factor was the securing of the Armories for all the games. Last season the games were staged in the Willows Building, which was very unsatisfactory for the comfort of the local fans. On the whole the prospects for the coming year are very promising.

A Full Bill
Two men's and one ladies' game are on the bill for Monday, and the followers of the hoop game can be assured that each one will be a "bummer" from start to finish. In the first tussle, the Sons of England and the Y.M.C.A. of the Men's B. class will come together for the first time this year. The Sons have played one or two exhibition games so far, and have made a very creditable showing. On the other hand the Y.M.C.A. has gathered together a very strong bunch of ballplayers who will make their opponents step some if they want to come off on the long end of the score. The game will start at 7:30 sharp, and will be followed immediately by the ladies' game.

The Hudson's Bay girls will make their 1925 debut, and their coach thinks they are good enough to win the Class B League this year. Their opponents will be the fast-stepping girls from the Victoria Steam Laundry, who are playing under the name of "Flashlights," and are reported to have a much superior team to that of last season. They will be out for a win Monday, so the store girls had better watch their step, check, and basket.

After the girls' tussle the Senior A Men's teams will take the floor in the big game of the evening. Saanichton will have their hands full holding down the well-known C.P.R. Outlaws. Although the locals are favored to come through with a win, the boys from Saanichton are just as likely to upset the dance sheet, and start the season with a victory. Last year the C.P.R.'s and the Outlaws were two separate teams, but they have now amalgamated to form one team, which has made them into a powerful squad of ballplayers that will carry them far in the league. This game alone should draw a good crowd, as both teams are noted for the fine brand of ball they play. The programme for tomorrow night is as follows:

The Programme
7:30 p.m., Men's B—Y.M.C.A. vs. Sons of England.

8:30 p.m., Ladies' B—Hudson's Bay vs. Flashlights.
Wednesday Evening, November 18
9:15 p.m., Senior A (Men's)—C.P.R. vs. Saanichton.
Men's C—Sooke vs. Machine Gunners.
Men's B—J.B.A.A. vs. Priors.
Men's A—Sooke vs. Onwegos.
Friday Evening, November 20
Men's C—St. Andrew's vs. Sons of England.
Ladies' A—Normal vs. College.
Men's A—College vs. C.P.R.

Ancient Buildings Save Caughnawaga, Montreal

When fire broke out in Caughnawaga, Montreal, two stone houses, nearly two centuries old, defied the efforts of the flames from a central frame structure. The bucket brigade worked valiantly, but nothing could have prevented a conflagration which would have threatened the town had it not been for the stout walls of the two old homes which hedged the fire to right and left.

Tammany Tigers Are Western Champions

Win Supremacy by Defeating Regina Rough Riders by Eleven to One

REGINA, Nov. 14.—Tammany Tigers, Winnipeg, senior rugby champions of Manitoba, defeated Regina's Rough Riders, 11-1 before a packed house at Park Hughes this afternoon, and took into their possession the gridiron supremacy of Western Canada. It was Winnipeg's first taste of the Western championship in many years, and as a reward for their triumph today the team will go east in quest of Dominion honors next month.

Played on a snow-soaked field, which militated against sensational displays of speed, the game was pretty much devoid of the spectacular, but abounded in hard knocks, and at least a half-dozen players were laid out during the course of the battle. The teams were equally matched in weight and in kicking, and incomparable Freddy Wilson had a considerable size over Greg Warren, but the greater experience of the Tigers, who have been playing rugby every week since the start of the Fall season, proved a deciding factor, though the issue hung in doubt right up to Buckingham's sensational dash in closing moments.

Regina Captures The Junior Title

Win Championship by Slim Margin by Defeating Eskimos by Eight to Seven

EDMONTON, Nov. 14.—By the slimmest possible margin, Regina won the Western Canada Junior rugby championship here today, the youngsters from Saskatchewan beating Junior Eskimos by a score of 7-8.

More experience, and a better system of team work gave Pats their slight edge. Right up till the time the whistle blew the result was in doubt. With a score of 5-7 and three minutes to go, Pats were in possession of the ball on their own twenty-yard line, and managed to hang on until time was up, dashing the hope of local supporters that the Eskimos would get a kick to dead line for the point needed to tie. Erskine and Kritzweiser were much in the limelight for Regina by their all-round play, while Traynor went over for their only touch, the other three points being picked up on rouse.

McGill Breaks Into Win Column at Last

TORONTO, Nov. 14.—By defeating Toronto Varsity, McGill broke into the win column of the intercollegiate rugby union series for the first time here today when after trailing ten to five with only a few minutes to go, they uncorked an extension run and St. Germain ran from mid-field for a touchdown. That tied the count and Manson gave McGill a one-point lead, with a convert. A crowd of about 8,000 viewed the game.

TORONTO, Nov. 14.—Halmy Beach are again champions of the O.R.F.U., defeating Varsity 10 to 0 today and earned their margin.

KINGSTON, Nov. 14.—In one of the poorest games of the year which finished in a burlesque, Queens beat M.A.A.A. here today 9 to 0, getting a lucky touch in the last quarter when Montreal seemed to have the game won. Fumbles by Montre proved costly all through the game.

HAMILTON, Nov. 14.—Showing marked superiority on the half line and seizing every opportunity offered by the home club, Camp Borden defeated Hamilton Flowing Club 14 to 6 this afternoon.

Basketball Referees' Association to Meet

There will be a meeting of the Victoria Basketball Referees' Association on Tuesday evening, November 17, in which some very important business will be brought up. Each team entered in the league is asked to send a representative who can be called upon to act as referee at some of the games during the winter. Any further information may be had by phoning Art Hole, 544(R) or 4025X after 4:30 p.m.

Human beings are mildly susceptible to foot-and-mouth disease, which is so contagious and deadly to cattle.

Book Is War Memorial for Nova Scotia

An ebony case encloses the "Book of Remembrance," with all the names of those of Nova Scotia who fell in the World War. The book has just been completed, and is to be placed in All Saints Cathedral, Halifax, Nova Scotia.

"Oh, yes, I must have a bath," exclaimed Lily. "But tomorrow I'll ask you to let me make a good lot of boiling water in the kitchen."

"It would be possible to make water hot here," said Cristina, hesitatingly. And Lily saw that there was a little stove not far from the bath. She put out her hand and touched it. "Why, it's hot!" she said in a startled voice. "There must have been a fire here this morning!"

Cristina grew faintly red. "No," she said, "not this morning—last night. I had a good deal of rubbish and it is impossible to burn much in that tiny kitchen—she was now speaking in a quick, agitated voice.

"Yes, I can well believe that," said Lily. The stove, unlit, for her, was only warm, the fire had gone quite out. "I will make a fire now," said Cristina, "and bring out a pot of water."

"No, don't trouble to do that. I'll manage all right this morning," said Lily. "Then I will bring Mademoiselle a towel." And bring one she did, but it had a big hole in it.

And then, after she had performed her toilet under somewhat difficult circumstances, Lily went into the kitchen and enjoyed a big bowl of cafe-au-lait.

"Now I'll sit on the terrace in the sun and be happy," said Lily. Cristina came and unlocked the front door, and Lily walked around on to the terrace. The drawing-room doors were closely shut and the blinds were down. Surely she must have dreamt what had seemed to happen last night? But, alas, she had only been out there a very few moments when she heard loud exclamations of concern and surprise. It was the countess talking rapidly and excitedly, by turns in French, English and Italian. Mingling with her agitated accents were the more guttural tones of Uncle Angelo.

Lily sprang up from the basket chair on which she had been sitting, and, turning round, through the now open long French window she saw the countess and Cristina all standing together in the drawing-room.

As soon as she saw Lily the countess called out: "A terrible thing has happened, my poor child! This room was entered in the night—the lock of the cabinet was forced—everything in it taken! Oh, why did Angelo put your fifty pounds there instead of taking it up to his room, where it would have been so safe?"

Yes, it was only too true! One of the doors of the beautiful inside cabinet had been wrenched off its hinges; it lay on the floor. As for the drawer into which she had seen Uncle Angelo place her little bundle of five pound notes, the thief, in his haste, had stuck it in again anyhow, wrong side up.

"Of course, it's a misfortune," said Lily, "but I can't help it. I didn't even keep the numbers of the notes, so I'm afraid there's no hope of my ever being able to recover them."

"I cannot understand what it happened," exclaimed the countess. She turned sternly to Cristina. "Did you overlook yourself?" she asked, accusingly.

"I know when it happened," said Lily. And then she told the countess of her experience of the night before. "Thank God you did nothing," said the countess in French, and he really did look agitated at last. "The brigands might have shot you had you given the alarm!"

As for Cristina, she sat down and, with a dreadful groan, threw her apron over her head and began rocking herself backwards and forwards. "You must come to me when you want a little money, dear child," said the countess, turning to Lily. "Perhaps your dear friend Lily will send you another fifty pounds when he hears of your loss?"

"He won't hear of my loss for some time," said Lily, "for he is leaving England today for the West Indies. But I've got a letter of credit on the bank here. The money is really mine, Aunt Cosy. Since my twenty-first birthday, which was the tenth of last July, I've had my own banking account. As a matter of fact, Uncle Tom wanted to give me a present, and I told him I would like to get, so he gave me the fifty pounds."

For the first time Aunt Cosy asked Lily all kinds of questions about poor Aunt Emmeline's illness and death—also as to whether she, Aunt Emmeline, had been a woman of means—whether she had left dear Lily a legacy—whether The Nest belonged to Uncle Tom, as also the furniture—and finally, whether Uncle Tom was likely to marry again?

"Oh, yes!" Lily laughed. "Cousin Rosa is very much alive, though she is over eighty. She leads that dull, quiet life so many very old people like to live. She much disapproved of my coming abroad, she wanted me to go and spend the winter with her."

"I wonder you did not do it," said the countess thoughtfully. "Miss Rosa must be very rich."

"Yes," said Lily. "Cousin Rosa is certainly very rich. But I should have become melancholy mad—living that sort of life!"

There was a pause. "And who will get her money?" asked the countess. Lily hesitated a moment—then, "I believe—in fact I know, for she told Uncle Tom so three or four years ago—that I am to have most of it, Aunt Cosy."

"You, Lily Fairfield?"

"There was an extraordinary amount of surprise, excitement and gratification in Aunt Cosy's vibrant voice."

"Why, Miss Rosa Fairfield must have been very rich!" As Lily said nothing, the countess went on: "A hundred thousand pounds—that is what poor Emmeline told me!"

"Yes, I believe she has quite that," said Lily. "And you do not feel excited?" The countess folded, gazed searchingly at the now flushed girl.

"I suppose I should have felt excited if I'd suddenly learnt the fact," said Lily slowly, "but I've always known it—in a sort of way."

"And what is your fortune apart from that, dear child?" asked the countess abruptly.

"My father left me eight thousand pounds," Lily said quietly. "But Uncle Tom never takes any of the interest of it for my education. He paid for everything, just as if I had been his daughter. So I have not a little over ten thousand pounds now."

The countess waited a moment as if making a calculation. "That would bring it—yes, if well invested—not far from fifteen thousand francs a year. If I am right. Then you have the enjoyment of that now, dear child?"

"Yes," said Lily. "I suppose I have."

They walked on a few steps. And then Aunt Cosy said suddenly: "You should not tell people of this money, Lily. I hope you do not talk freely to strangers?"

And then the girl did feel a little offended. "I've never spoken of my money matters to any living soul till today," she said with some vehemence. "And I shouldn't have said anything to you, Aunt Cosy, if you hadn't asked me!"

tea called out: "A terrible thing has happened, my poor child! This room was entered in the night—the lock of the cabinet was forced—everything in it taken! Oh, why did Angelo put your fifty pounds there instead of taking it up to his room, where it would have been so safe?"

Yes, it was only too true! One of the doors of the beautiful inside cabinet had been wrenched off its hinges; it lay on the floor. As for the drawer into which she had seen Uncle Angelo place her little bundle of five pound notes, the thief, in his haste, had stuck it in again anyhow, wrong side up.

"Of course, it's a misfortune," said Lily, "but I can't help it. I didn't even keep the numbers of the notes, so I'm afraid there's no hope of my ever being able to recover them."

"I cannot understand what it happened," exclaimed the countess. She turned sternly to Cristina. "Did you overlook yourself?" she asked, accusingly.

"I know when it happened," said Lily. And then she told the countess of her experience of the night before. "Thank God you did nothing," said the countess in French, and he really did look agitated at last. "The brigands might have shot you had you given the alarm!"

As for Cristina, she sat down and, with a dreadful groan, threw her apron over her head and began rocking herself backwards and forwards. "You must come to me when you want a little money, dear child," said the countess, turning to Lily. "Perhaps your dear friend Lily will send you another fifty pounds when he hears of your loss?"

"He won't hear of my loss for some time," said Lily, "for he is leaving England today for the West Indies. But I've got a letter of credit on the bank here. The money is really mine, Aunt Cosy. Since my twenty-first birthday, which was the tenth of last July, I've had my own banking account. As a matter of fact, Uncle Tom wanted to give me a present, and I told him I would like to get, so he gave me the fifty pounds."

For the first time Aunt Cosy asked Lily all kinds of questions about poor Aunt Emmeline's illness and death—also as to whether she, Aunt Emmeline, had been a woman of means—whether she had left dear Lily a legacy—whether The Nest belonged to Uncle Tom, as also the furniture—and finally, whether Uncle Tom was likely to marry again?

Bishop of London Will Visit Here

Dr. Winnington Ingram Will Lay Foundation Stone of New Christ Church Cathedral

An announcement of great interest to Victoria is that the Honorable and the Rt. Rev. A. F. Winnington Ingram, Bishop of London, is to be in Victoria next year, and will lay the foundation stone of the new Christ Church Cathedral.

Bishop Ingram has a brother living in Eastern Canada, and has several times visited that part of the Dominion. But the visit here next year will be the first one to British Columbia, although as president of the R.C. Church Aid Society, which has done a great deal to help the church in this part of Canada, he naturally has a very great interest in this part of the Empire. From Victoria he will sail for the Orient.

The Rt. Hon. and Rt. Rev. Arthur Foley Winnington Ingram, K.C.V.O., D.D., J.D., was born in 1854, in Worcestershire, and was educated at Marlborough College and Keble College, Oxford, and among the important ecclesiastical offices which he has held are that of Rural Dean of Spitalfields, Canon of St. Paul's Cathedral, Bishop of Stepney, Chaplain of the London Rifle Brigade, and since 1901, Dean of the Chapel Royal.

Home Furniture Co. Now in New Quarters

Former Borden Hotel Converted Into Modern Store by Fred Bartholomew

Confidence in the future prosperity of Victoria was shown recently when Mr. Fred W. Bartholomew opened the new and spacious quarters of the Home Furniture Company at 325 Port Street. The new premises are a block higher up than the previous location, but Mr. Bartholomew is highly optimistic in regard to the prospects of a movement of trade to that district.

The new premises of the furniture store comprise the whole building, which formerly was the Borden Hotel. The flooring space is three times as large as that of the old premises, and enables the proprietor to show his stock to a better advantage.

Many questions have been asked Mr. Bartholomew whether he has made a wise move in changing his quarters a block away from the main business centre. His answer has been that owing to an expansion of business larger quarters are necessary, and by moving to upper Port Street the company has reduced rent and overhead costs. This has enabled it to lower the prices of goods. "I feel sure that the people of Victoria will walk a block to save money and the company is now in a position to do that for them," Mr. Bartholomew said.

French Flyers Rescued From Fallen Plane After Two Hours' Drift in Sea

BOULOGNE, France, Nov. 14.—Pilot de Lale and his mechanic escaped with an icy two-hour bath in the waters of the English channel today, when the plane which they were flying from London to Paris fell eight miles from Cape Gris Nez. They were rescued, numb and cold, by a passing steamer and brought here. The plane was also saved. First reports, indicating the machine was one of the regular passenger-carrying liners which ply between London and Paris caused a flurry of anxiety on both sides of the Channel.

Herbert—I hear the captain of the yacht we were on has had luck. His wife has run away from him. Jim—Yes. He took her for a mate and she proved a skipper.

Sir Christopher Wren Built Sixty London Churches; Got Little Salary

WREN'S GRAVE IN THE CRYPT OF ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL.

After the Great Fire of London in 1666 the King and Parliament were "infinitely zealous" for the rebuilding of the city. John Evelyn, the diarist, says that he submitted a plan for the new city. "It was the second that was seen within two days after the conflagration; but Dr. Wren got the start of me." Wren had just been to Paris. He was a scientist and an astronomer, a young man filled with dreams of a new and beautiful London.

He was made Surveyor-General by Charles II and undertook to rebuild St. Paul's and some sixty more city churches at the munificent salary of two hundred pounds a year, less than a thousand dollars. He also built three or four palaces, some charming country homes, hospitals, almshouses and several very beautiful gates and monuments.

When enjoyed his little jokes, too, occasionally. There is a charming old town hall in Windsor in which the roof of the great hall as designed by Wren was unsupported by pillars. The authorities were sceptical and insisted upon pillars, which Wren dutifully put up. About a century ago it was discovered that the top of the pillars were several inches from the ceiling, and Wren was justified in his contention that his roof needed no support.

Wren built his churches so that their beautiful spires would all harmonize with his masterpiece, St. Paul's Cathedral, for London was not a great city then, and his steeples were plainly visible in their grouping around the massive central dome. Today the vistas are cut off and the churches are hidden away. About thirty of them survive.

For over fifty years he filled the post of Surveyor-General. His work was all done under the Stuart sovereigns, and when George I mounted the throne the aged architect was displaced. He retired to Hampton Court, and once each year he drove to London to spend a long time beneath the spacious dome of St. Paul's, contemplating his handiwork, his most cherished accomplishment.

On February 25, 1723, he made his last pilgrimage. He sat again beneath the great dome, he reflected upon his works, and the events of his ninety years unrolled slowly across his vision. That night, when he returned to Hampton Court, Wren fell asleep, still dreaming; and so they found him. It was a sleep from which he never awakened. He was buried in the crypt of St. Paul's where you may find his grave today. If you wander away from the official party and spend a little while in solitary loitering among the historic dead. Above is a plain little tablet which translated from Latin reads: "Underneath lies buried the builder of this church and city, Christopher Wren, who lived for more than ninety years, not for himself but for the public good. Reader, if you ask for a monument, look about you."

Elimination of Politics Urged As to P.G.E. Line

Only Hope for Road Lies in Its Completion to Peace River, Says Member for Cariboo

Advices C.P.R. Purchase

Elimination of politics and sentiment for consideration of the problems affecting the Pacific Great Eastern was urged by Mr. David A. Stoddart, Provincial party member, for Cariboo, in the Legislature, on Friday. The only hope for the road was its completion to the Peace River country, he declared.

There seemed to be a general disposition in all quarters to get rid of the road, he said. The only logical purchaser appeared to him to be the C.P.R., and he thought that it would be the part of wisdom to endeavor to carry on negotiations with that road. He thought that if the C.P.R. purchased the Edmonton and Dunvegan line consideration might be given to the idea of taking over the P.G.E. and connecting the two via Prince George.

The speaker expressed his opposition to the completion of the line from Whistler to Squamish at this present time. If it were considered necessary to do some building it might be extended to Prince George, although he did not see how that would help the financial situation, but it would keep faith with the settlers. The only hope, he said, was in completing the line through to the Peace River country; how that faith must be kept with those who settled there expecting that the railway would be built as originally planned.

Blunders Made
Mr. Stoddart criticized Premier Oliver for having changed the route of the line to go into Quesnel. It was both a railroading and a political blunder. He declared that the people of British Columbia were not going to stand any more politics in connection with the P.G.E., neither did he see where a protective policy would benefit Cariboo mines or cattle ranges. On the other hand, reciprocity would have brought prosperity to the Chilcotin cattle men.

In respect to the recent election of a Conservative in Cariboo riding in the Dominion fight, he said the political complexion of the riding had changed because Hon. Dr. King, Federal Minister of Public Works, had attempted to interfere. Here, too, plans of the Liberals, and as a result, the Liberals had voted Conservative in protest.

He complimented the Minister of Finance on his speech the previous day and suggested that in respect to school taxes all the lands be taxed. At the present time in rural communities properties within a six-mile radius of a school had to bear the burden.

Statement "All Bunk"
He had been much interested in the statement made by the member for South Okanagan of conditions relating to the fruit industry, and would like to see the fruit-growers given some assistance.

Owing to the absence from his seat of the Minister of Lands, he would not voice the criticism that he had intended of the operation of the Grazing Commission, said Mr. Stoddart, except to say that a statement reported to have been made by the Minister to the effect that everything would be satisfactory after "the bumps had been smoothed down" was "all bunk."

Touching on the absentee vote, the speaker said that if some arrangement could be made for the counting of the absentee ballots on election night he would be in favor of continuance of the vote.

Comox Berry Growers Meet

Growers Have Lost Some Money in Troubles of B.C. Berry Growers' Union

COURTENAY, Nov. 14.—On Friday night the berry men of the district held a meeting in the Agricultural Hall for the purpose of winding up the season's business. Nearly 14,000 worth of small fruit had been handled by the association during the season at a cost of about ten per cent of the turnover. This was considered a very reasonable percentage.

About sixty per cent of the total receipts had already been paid to the growers, and some of the berries sent to the British Columbia Berry Growers' Union in the early part of the season had not been paid for, it was said. The debt amounted to over $400, which equalled nearly ten per cent of the total receipts.

Mr. Norman Pritchard, secretary for the local association, said it was unfortunate that the amount had not been paid, but he could see no other way, but to send the fruit to the Union at the time.

Mr. H. P. Aliberry expressed the opinion that when there was a central association the berry men should line up with it. They had been let down rather badly this time, it was true, but the central association was bound to get on its feet sooner or later, and then consideration would be shown for those growers who had supported the co-operative efforts of the past.

Mr. Pattison, who was in the chair, and who is the largest grower in the district, thought the berries should have been shipped to the Empress Manufacturing Company, as had been done the previous year.

Mr. Macdonald seemed to be of the same opinion, as the Union had let the berry growers down from the very first, he said.

Mr. Thomas said that there was no doubt that co-operation of the right kind was the best for the growers, but so far the co-operatives seemed to have been unfortunate in the choice of their executive heads.

It was decided to pool all crate and jam berries throughout the season, with the exception of the berries, to pay outstanding accounts and to make equalizing payments to the growers, but to leave an amount of $10 in the bank account to take care of incidentals.

Cowichan Women's Institute Gives Aid to Solarium

DUNCAN, Nov. 14.—At the regular meeting of the Cowichan Women's Institute held in Duncan, the secretary, Mrs. Rote, announced that the sum of $12.65 would be forwarded from the Institute to the Solarium fund. This consists of $62.85, the proceeds from the recent auction sale promoted by the Institute, and an additional $20 from the scholars of St. Peter's Sunday School, Quamichan. The Institute hopes to raise an additional sum for the Solarium in the New Year.

At the request of several members the secretary was asked to make it known that classes were forthcoming. These classes are open to all residents in the district. The subjects suggested by the members were cooking, home nursing, elocution, and in response to the appeal for ideas for the 1926 programme, various suggestions were handed in, these will be considered by the directors at their next meeting.

It was arranged that the December meeting should begin at 2 p.m., and after the usual business session a sale of women's work will be held, to which all interested in Institute work are invited to attend. Tea and a social hour will follow.

A brief report of the recent district conference held in Victoria was given by the official delegate, Mrs. Rote, and at the conclusion of the business session a paper on Robert Browning, was read by the president, Mrs. A. W. Johnson. The chief event in the life of the poet, and his wife, the no less gifted Elizabeth Barrett Browning, was read from his writings with details about his disposition and personality combined to make an interesting and well written paper.

Tea was served by Mrs. Kier and Mrs. Dunkley.

Many Attend at Armistice Service

Parkville Is Scene of Ceremony—Masquerade Dance Held at Errington

PARKVILLE, Nov. 14.—Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, over 200 people attended the war memorial service, Armistice morning. Some fifty men, women and children were on parade under the command of Lieutenant E. J. Feary. Girl Guides and Boy Scouts were in full attendance. After Lieutenant Feary had read the roll call and the impressive two minutes' silence was over, the hymn, "O God, Our Help in Ages Past," was sung, ably accompanied by Mrs. R. F. Hickey on the organ. Rev. Mr. Wiseman read the lesson, followed by the hymn "Thy Kingdom Come, O God." The Rev. Mr. Popham pronounced the Lord's Prayer. Many beautiful wreaths were placed at the foot of the cross. "O Canada" was then sung, followed by the benediction. Before the ceremony was concluded, by the singing of "God Save the King," the last post was sounded by Mr. E. Moore, of Dashwood.

Over 200 people attended the Armistice masquerade dance, held in the Errington War Memorial Hall. Many good costumes were seen and it took the judges a long time before they could decide on the prize winners. Miss Dunn, as a cave woman, and Mr. A. H. Taylor, as a cave man; Mrs. R. F. Hickey, as a fairy, and Mr. R. F. Hickey, as a prince; Mr. Knight, as Benjamin Franklin, and the Misses Ponsford, of Qualicum Beach, as three old-fashioned ladies, all vied for prizes. The Novelty Five Orchestra, from Nanaimo, provided excellent music.

Among the many people present were: Mr. and Mrs. J. Trill, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Rushton, Dr. and Mrs. L. T. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. W. Braddock, Mr. and Mrs. Hallin, Mr. and Mrs. Griffin, Mr. and Mrs. B. Hirst, Colonel and Mrs. Bourke, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Booker, Mr. and Mrs. G. Brice, Mr. and Mrs. H. Newmarch, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Weld, Mr. and Mrs. Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. McMillan, Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. Pattison, Mrs. T. Hirst, Mrs. Kemp, Mrs. Nicholson, Mrs. B. Harrison, Mrs. H. K. Harrison, Mrs. Robert Taylor, Mrs. Osborne, Mrs. A. Stewart, Mrs. Howe, Mrs. Pettikew, Miss Wrotonowski, Miss Coldcut, Miss Tryon, Miss E. Pettikew, Miss Pearce, Miss Appleby, Miss Musio, Miss Pottinger, Miss B. Roberts, Messrs. A. Taylor, J. Hodgins, Winder, B. Taylor, H. Nieklin, Knight, C. P. Vetter, B. Rushton, H. Rushton and R. Rushton.

House Is Destroyed

COURTENAY, Nov. 13.—At 10 o'clock, Thursday night, the electric fire alarm sounded to summon help to Dr. Millard's house, in the Happy Valley (Minto), but the house was completely destroyed. It seems that Dr. Millard had left home some two hours, or so previously for the purpose of attending a banquet in Cumberland; and it is said that he did not know his house was burned until his actual return to the spot where it had stood, after the banquet. The property destroyed last night was purchased at an auction sale some two or three years ago.

Keating Personal News

KEATING, Nov. 14.—The Ladies' Aid Society held its regular monthly meeting in the church parlor on Thursday afternoon with a fair attendance. The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. McClure, and the minutes of the previous meeting were read by the secretary, Miss Deering. Rev. Mr. Lees, the pastor, gave a very interesting talk.

Arrangements were made for a sale of home cooking to be held by the ladies on December 12.

The mission band met in the South Saanich Union Church on Wednesday afternoon with a large attendance of children. This band is under the supervision of Miss Deering.

Schoolmistress: "Now, children, what did the Romans do for the Britons?"

Small Girl: "They civilized 'em, Miss."

Schoolmistress: "And how did they do that?"

Second Small Girl: "Please, Miss, they taught 'em how to fight."

Women's Clubs and Societies

Lodge Primrose No. 32

There was a good attendance of members at the regular meeting of Lodge Primrose No. 32, held in Harmony Hall on Friday evening. The W. President, Mrs. Joyce, and Mrs. Smith, D.D.G.P., were visitors. There were two other visitors from Lodge Princess Alexandra No. 13. Mrs. Humber's report of the last dance showed it to have been a great success. There is to be a bazaar on the afternoon of Friday, November 21, which Mayor Pendray has kindly promised to open. It is to be in the Harmony Hall, and there will be a dance in the evening, conveyed by Mrs. Haron. Suggestions were made as to the anniversary banquet, but it was decided to leave all the arrangements to the executive. Lodge Primrose will be held on Monday evening, November 22, at 8 o'clock. The members will be asked to bring a dish to the bazaar. It is hoped that all club members will be present.

Do Your Bowels Ever Become Constipated?

A free motion of the bowels, every day, should be the aim of every one who aspires to perfect health, for since the bowels become clogged up all the other organs of the body get deranged, and all kinds of diseases and disorders are liable to attack the system.

you will find that they will regulate and keep your bowels and liver in proper shape, and when this is done there is not much chance of your ever being sick.

This valuable remedy has been on the market for the past 32 years; put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

ard of refereeing here, we in Victoria are proud to boast that up to date this year we have had only one case of "ungentlemanly conduct" reported by a referee, and that not a very serious one, but the council thinks it a splendid opportunity of going on record that as far as it is concerned it views this matter in a very serious light, and it wishes to issue a friendly warning to all managers, captains and players that future offenders will be very severely dealt with.

There is too much at stake, apart from the fact that a player may seriously jeopardize the position of his club; there is always the danger that the game as a whole in Victoria may be allowed to deteriorate to such an extent that it will fail to attract recruits to the ranks of its players or spectators to swell its gates.

Any game that fails to attract the sporting public is doomed.

Ottawa Senators

Are Champions

OTTAWA, Nov. 14.—Ottawa Senators captured the Big Four football championship here today when they defeated the Hamilton Tigers by a score of eight to three. Today's victory gave the locals their first championship in fifteen seasons.

The winners turned in a glib exhibition of football to capture honors. The Tigers fought back valiantly and gave the locals a stubborn battle from first to last. It was a game and a half, with no quarter asked for the entire sixty minutes.

Ottawa jumped into an early lead through Monahan's touch in the first minute of play.

Tigers fought back with a strong wind behind them and added singles before they changed over.

A safety touch went into the Ottawa, the second period, increasing their total to seven, while the third period went scoreless.

Pola in "Flower of Night" Screened at Royal Victoria

Original Screen Story Written by Joseph Hergesheimer for Paramount Star Has Scenes Laid in California During the Days of the Great Gold Rush

For his first original screen story, written especially for Pola Negri, Joseph Hergesheimer, one of the foremost living novelists, has taken humanity at its most dramatic tide in history—the height of the influx into California following the gold discovery. He has set his heroine into this scene of colorful human contrasts and let her work out her destiny of love.

"Flower of Night" opens with Capitol Theatre tomorrow, opens with Carlota Villalon (Pola Negri) and her father, Don Giraldo y Villalon (Joseph Dowling), last of their great family, dining meagrely in their hacienda.

Don Giraldo is turning bitterly over an invitation extended him to attend a festival at the Flor de Noche Mine. The mine has been wrested from the Villalons by the invading gold seekers. Drawn by love.

But Carlota, attends the dance, drawn by love of a young American, who has come out from the East to be assistant mine superintendent.

Her father, crushed by her disobedience and regarding her proud old family name as disgraced, ends his life. Carlota goes to San Francisco, where her funds are soon exhausted.

A dance hall girl, named Josefa (Helen Lee Worthen), aids in getting work in Miguel's cafe. There Josefa sees her and treats her with scorn over her social descent.

On Monday night, in addition to this, the usual Music Lovers' Night, under the direction of A. Prescott, will be an added attraction.

"Broken Laws" on Columbia's Screen

Mrs. Wallace Reid's Powerful Photodrama Depicts Many Thrilling Situations

"Remember, they're only children." But when an eighteen year old boy takes a girl of the same age into the country in his high-powered roadster are they?

This is one of the tense situations in "Broken Laws," Mrs. Wallace Reid's new powerful photodrama of mother love and the law, which comes to the Columbia Theatre Monday and all week.

Mrs. Reid's portrayal of Joan, the indulgent mother, surpasses by far anything this talented artist has done in the past.

Believing that her son Bobby is still a "baby" she humors him, but he soon demonstrates that he is no longer a "child," and with serious results that lead to some of the most dramatic scenes of the play.

Bobby and Patsy, his little sweetheart, dash off in Bobby's new roadster. Their first trip leads to others, and finally to a notorious roadhouse.

Crashes on Road.

Here Patsy's father finds her and takes her home. Angry at having lost his "girl" Bobby dashes off after them. In the darkness, on a lonely country road, he crashes into a vegetable wagon, killing the aged wife of the vegetable peddler.

Bobby is tried for manslaughter and found guilty. His mother learns, too late, that he is not any longer a "child."

Her plea for him, after he is convicted, provides one of the most effective bits of emotional acting seen on the screen in many months.

It will bring home to fathers and mothers everywhere that their eighteen-year-old boys and girls are no longer "children" and that they cannot be treated as such without disastrous results.

"Broken Laws" is a thrilling, worthwhile drama of today.

"Blossom Time" at Royal on Thursday

Franz Schubert's Operetta of Old Vienna Shows Here for Three Nights

The Meers. Schubert will present the lovely operetta, "Blossom Time," based on the life and love of Franz Schubert, at the Royal Theatre for a three-day engagement, commencing Thursday evening, with a matinee on Saturday.

The story of "Blossom Time" deals with the love of Franz Schubert. The scenes are laid in old Vienna and the story is told in three acts. The first act occurs at an outdoor restaurant in the famous Prater Park in May, 1836.

At this restaurant there gather three pretty little maids, Miti, Fritz and Kiti. They are famous over Vienna for their prettiness and charm. They go to the restaurant to meet their sweethearts. Schubert falls in love with Miti, but there is some doubt as to the girl's love for him—Miti is fascinated by his devotion and music. Schubert has many other friends, the Baron von Schober, a prima donna, Helabruna, and various other people who enter his life. The prima donna thinks the Baron has fallen in love with Miti and hopes to separate them, but in the end it is the Baron who wins Miti from Schubert.

The regular seat sale opens Tuesday morning, but the mail order sale has been going on at a rapid pace for the past two weeks. To be assured of good seats book your orders early.

Dominion Features Budapest Beauty

Valentino's New Leading Lady Appears in "The Dark Angel" All This Week

The "Dark Angel," the first National attraction coming to the Dominion Theatre tomorrow, marks the American screen debut of beautiful Vilma Banky, who has created such a sensation in Hollywood and who is now Rudolph Valentino's leading lady.

Miss Banky was but recently "discovered" in Budapest by Samuel Goldwyn, the famous producer, while the latter was enjoying a pleasure tour through Europe.

Arrived at Budapest, he heard frequent allusions to a young and beautiful screen star who had just taken that city by storm. She was working in a local studio and had appeared in two or three Hungarian films with great success.

Attracted by Photograph.

The producer, accustomed to screen aspirants attempting to gain his attention, thought nothing of the girl until he was attracted to her photo in a Budapest photographer's window.

He inquired her identity, learning that she was the "Vilma Banky" of whom he had heard so much. He immediately endeavored to get in touch with the young lady.

His attempts, however, were all seemingly frustrated—apparently her employers did not relish the possibility of losing her. But just as Mr. Goldwyn was leaving Budapest—in fact, he was at the station with his baggage already loaded on the train—she arrived in a taxi, with her personal manager.

Samuel Goldwyn, who perhaps has discovered more famous stars than any other man, took one look at the girl, retrieved his baggage from the train, postponed his departure, and that evening gave her a long-time contract to appear in his productions.

In "The Dark Angel" she appears opposite Ronald Colman. Other players of note in the cast are Wyndham Standing, Florence Turner, Helen Jerome Kelly, Frank Elliott and Charlie Lane.

British Organize Film Association

Bernard Shaw and H. G. Wells Launch Society With "Certain Aesthetic Standards"

A society has just been formed which intends to do for films of a certain aesthetic standard what the Phoenix and Stage Societies are doing for plays, says The London Observer.

Among its members are Mr. Roger Fry, Mr. Maynard Keynes, Mr. Bernard Shaw and Mr. H. G. Wells. Sunday afternoon performances will be given at the Tivoli of pictures with pretensions to sincerity and of experimental and historic films.

The experimental films, the Hon. Ivor Montagu, a member of the Council, explained to a representative of The Observer, include those of a scientific character, not the educational pictures designed for the public, but one or two research films such as those shown at the Royal Society, studies in rapid rhythm produced at the Institut Marey in Paris, and studies in non-representational design produced by Manray, Ferdinand Leger and others, and a series of the German "Absolute" films. It is hoped also to revive old films of the period from 1905 to 1915 that cinema-goers like to remember, but have no chance today of seeing—films including the early Chaplin comedies and the two-reel Red Indian pictures.

The season began on October 25, and there will be eight performances. The first will include Wax Figures, a stylistic film, in which three of the most famous actors of the screen will take part, Jannings as, Haroun al Raschid, Krauss as Jack the Ripper, and Conrad Veidt as Ivan the Terrible. Some features of subsequent programmes will be "Cinderella" in a baroque decor; a naturalistic film called "Nip," with Jannings and Elisabeth Bergner, who played St. Joan in Reinhardt's production of Mr. Shaw's play in Berlin, "Raskolnikov," acted by a Moscow Art Theatre Company; and a review of all the cubistic work that has been done in Europe.

Rabbits in Cascade Mountains Put on Winter Snowshoes

TACOMA, Wash., Nov. 14.—Rabbits in the high Cascade Mountains are putting on their snow shoes for the hard winter ahead. Soon they will be able to go over the snow without difficulty, thanks to this arrangement with nature.

The creatures are called Snowshoe Rabbits, sometimes known as Varying Hares. Their hind feet have long, spreading toes, which in winter are covered with coarse hair, giving the rear feet fully four times the area of the fore feet. This natural snowshoe enables Mr. Rabbit to travel in snow in which the ordinary bunny would founder.

The Snowshoe Rabbit also changes color in winter. In summer he is brown, to match the landscape, but in winter he becomes entirely white.

Gounod's "Faust" Is Great Money Maker

London Authority Estimates Opera Produced $300,000 for Composer

Mr. Richard Northcott, the archivist of the Royal Opera, Covent Garden, recently broadcast an anecdotal history of Gounod's "Faust," an opera which probably has earned more money than any similar composition. In an interview in The London Times Mr. Northcott said:

"I am afraid it would not be fair to the British Broadcasting Company to tell you the facts I have collected for my 'Faust,' but I may mention that I went specially to Paris a few days ago to verify my story. And by a coincidence, the work is performed at the opera for the 1,723rd time! 'Faust' remains the biggest money-maker for impresarios, despite—or, perhaps, because of—the familiarity of its melodies."

"I have tried to discover what Gounod received in fees for this work, but I have not been able to find out."

the only composition he is remembered by, and my estimate, based on substantial information, is a figure in the neighborhood of £40,000. Puccini made a small fortune from 'Il Bo-hème,' and Richard Strauss, who is not modest in his demands, has done well with 'Der Rosenkavalier,' and may do better when the film is exhibited. But I know no opera that has shared the universal popularity of 'Faust.'

Miss Mary Powell as the beautiful Miti, Miss Jeanne Densen as the charming Kiti, and William Selery as the genial Kranz in "Blossom Time," the unforgettable musical dream coming to the Royal Victoria Theatre for three days, commencing Thursday, November 19.

Manager Ralph Calladine, of the Playhouse Theatre, announces that during this week the picture programme will be changed four times, but the stage production by the Reginald Hincks Company, Potash and Perlmutter in "See Life," will run all week.

"We are offering four of the most popular 'old-time' pictures available, and we feel quite sure that Victoria theatregoers will like to see them once again," says the Playhouse Theatre management.

Monday and Tuesday's picture attraction will be Richard Barthelmess and Lillian Gish in D. W. Griffith's famous production, "Broken Blossoms." This picture is one of D. W. Griffith's most popular productions, and many movie fans will be delighted to have the opportunity of seeing this picture once again. "The Sheik," starring Rudolph Valentino, is Wednesday's attraction, and Mary Pickford, in "The Love Light," is booked for Thursday. "The Mollycoddle," featuring Douglas Fairbanks, will be the feature picture for Friday and Saturday.

Reginald Hincks is presenting the second of a series of plays of the doings of Potash and Perlmutter. "See Life" is the title of the latest play, which, it is reported, is a screen from beginning to end. Harold Bechtel and Ernie Patch play the title roles, which is a sufficient guarantee the play will be a big success.

This natural snowshoe enables Mr. Rabbit to travel in snow in which the ordinary bunny would founder.

The Snowshoe Rabbit also changes color in winter. In summer he is brown, to match the landscape, but in winter he becomes entirely white.

Miss Mary Powell as the beautiful Miti, Miss Jeanne Densen as the charming Kiti, and William Selery as the genial Kranz in "Blossom Time," the unforgettable musical dream coming to the Royal Victoria Theatre for three days, commencing Thursday, November 19.

the only composition he is remembered by, and my estimate, based on substantial information, is a figure in the neighborhood of £40,000. Puccini made a small fortune from 'Il Bo-hème,' and Richard Strauss, who is not modest in his demands, has done well with 'Der Rosenkavalier,' and may do better when the film is exhibited. But I know no opera that has shared the universal popularity of 'Faust.'

Rin-Tin-Tin Found in Dugout

Famous Dog Actor of Movie Picture Fame Was German War Dog, Says Owner

Conflicting stories concerning the discovery on a battlefield of Rin-Tin-Tin, movie dog and star of Warner Brothers' pictures, has led to an account of his rescue in France by Lee Duncan, his present owner, says a writer in The New York Times.

The account was received by Robert Smith, Jr., son of the president of the Lumbermen's Trust Company Bank, Hollywood. Warner Brothers recently presented the Smith family with two police dogs, "Rinty," a son of Rin-Tin-Tin, and Nannette, a daughter of King Herod, a German canine actor, Robert was recently taken to the hospital, and it was to cheer him up that Duncan told the story of the father of Robert's pup.

"You will recall," he writes, "that during the war I was in the flying service, and when we started the 8th Mitchell drive September 15 we drove the Germans back some 25 kilometers and established our advanced flying field on the territory that had belonged to Germany a few hours before. I was one of the advance guards examining the territory which we had just captured, and found that it included what had been the headquarters of German police dogs.

Litter Found in Dugout

"We found eleven of these animals dead and in an old abandoned dugout a mother dog with five puppies just three days old. We were all animal lovers and so took the mother dog and all her puppies into the airframe of the 155th aero squadron at Toul, France. I was given the pick of the litter. I picked one and named him Rin-Tin-Tin, after the good-luck dolls that were so popular in France during the war.

"Adopting a dog in the army is quite an undertaking. He had to be watched just like a baby lest he pick up something that he should not have. Razor blades, for instance, had a particular attraction for the puppies. Following their instincts, for instance, they would go for the rust on them. When I came back to the airframe nine times out of ten he would be out. Perhaps this was the start of his high-jumping career, for from the very first he could go over anything with ease.

Brought to California

"When the armistice was signed I had to obtain a special permit from the French and American Governments to bring the dog back to America. When we landed in California the crate for the police dog was just starting. It seems that the great work they did during the war made them popular, not only in America, but in all countries. Police dog clubs were started everywhere.

"It was then that the Shepherd or Police Dog Club in California was formed. Rin-Tin-Tin was entered as a working police dog in contest to bring out and show the great work of the war dog. His consistent winning brought him before the public eye, and at the Ambassador Hotel grounds three years ago in Los Angeles, when he established a high jumping record of 12 feet, he was used for a slow motion subject, working before the camera for the first time.

Learning to Act

"Learning to act and take directions before the camera was a great deal harder than police or war work. It meant taking direction without continuously looking back. It meant doing all of the things that a dog would not do naturally and many things that he would unnaturally do, such as posing for pictures in the warm California sunshine, when he would have to stop panting and almost stop breathing in some of his scenes where he was playing the part of a wounded wolf.

"Rin-Tin-Tin's success as an actor has been the result of education, and I have been able to educate him as the result of my seeing dogs educated during the war. It gave me an opportunity to study the natural actions and facial expressions of dogs, and thus I learned how to have my own dog express different feelings and emotions before a camera.

Giving Tongue

"One of the hardest things to have him do was to give tongue on command. Coaxing him with dainty food did not work. But one evening at home as he sat at the fireplace a stranger stepped on the porch. He was immediately on his feet and gave tongue. The bit of action taught me a lot and naturally I got him to understand what I meant when I used the word speak. So I used this again and again until he knew it. All his expressions and actions were figured out in similar manner.

"Rin-Tin-Tin enjoys his work before the camera and at no time is he ever punished or abused. Every morning he goes through a routine of exercises to keep his muscles in a hardened condition. He has a balanced ration of meat, vegetables, eggs, rice and especially must have his ice cream for dessert. The Red Cross people in France got him in the ice cream habit, giving him cornucopias. He loves to swim and is given a chance to go in the water once a week, which keeps his coat shiny. He weighs seventy pounds, is wolf sable in color, and has dark brown eyes.

Death Elects Nationalist To Australia Parliament

MELBOURNE, Nov. 14.—The death is announced of Charles McDonald, Labor member of the House of Representatives for the Kennedy division of Queensland, who was a candidate for re-election in the Federal election today. The result of McDonald's death was the election of W. Francis, Nationalist (Government Party), unopposed.

All other seats in the Commonwealth were contested.

Revolutionizes Film Industry

Baby Crocodiles Brought Into Picture as Monsters—Three-Foot Models Replace Huge Constructions

A new method of filming motion pictures has recently been perfected by its German inventor, Eugen Schuefftan, who claims that the process will revolutionize the art of the producer. A picture called "Jealousy," which was filmed by the new process, was recently shown in London, and in referring to the process and its results, The Graphic had the following to say:

Briefly, the method consists in photographing simultaneously, on a single film, two images reduced or magnified to any size desired, whether of persons or places, in motion or at rest. By means of mirrors and magnifiers, attached to an ordinary film camera, small models can be substituted for the giant constructions hitherto used, and only such parts as come in actual contact with actors, such as steps, portals, windows, and so forth, need be built in their actual size.

For instance, the rough walls of a huge courtyard are built in with a height of steps, portals, windows, and so forth, need be built in their actual size.

The night scene of a crowd leaving the theatre was done in this way, with a model a yard high, though the people seemed to be pouring out of the building. In another scene where the wife is tortured by the thought of her husband's unfaithfulness, the words of the book she is reading are blurred with a love scene which she imagines her husband to be enacting with her rival and at which she gapes in horror. Formerly such scenes had to be photographed separately and two negatives combined in a single position, entailing endless work, often with poor results owing to the difference of light in the two pictures. The Schuefftan method has superseded all this, and gets the effect in a single "shot."

Models instead of real buildings have been used before, of course. In "Notre Dame" the upper parts of the cathedral were modelled, but the difficulty has always lain in combining them with the actual scenery; the joints always had to be made on a straight line, fitting on to a straight architectural line in the setting. Schuefftan has found a way to overcome this difficulty; he can project a photograph of clouds moving over a mountain on a model of a landscape before which is a real waterfall.

Wonderful scenes of fantasy and adventure can be produced, the inventor said, pointing to some baby crocodiles which are soon to appear in a picture magnified three or four times the size of men they surround, producing a most terrifying effect. Naturally, with so many interests involved in the revolution Schuefftan's system will entail, producers were a little hesitant at first to make the plunge. For more than four years the inventor has worked at the scheme, and it was practically perfected six months ago. The Ufa firm first tried it out in all its details, and finally purchased the rights for Germany. The Universal Film Company were the first American concern in the field, and while their technical experts were examining the scheme, took an option. It required only a few hours in the studio to convince the American experts of the value of the system. This company immediately purchased the rights for Canada and the United States. And it is stated that already in Universal Town, near Hollywood, the studios are filled with new workers.

Already in the Ufa "film city," Neubabelsberg, near Berlin, and in "Universal City" at Hollywood they are scrapping the huge plaster and cement constructions which figure in the making of the feature attraction at the Capitol Theatre all this week. The Ufa firm has already in "Jealousy," a recently produced Ufa film, but the full value of the new method can be judged from "Jealousy," which the inventor regards as only a fairly successful test, but from the new colossal film, "Metropolis," soon to be released by Ufa, in which the new invention has been improved a man likes me in best!

Famous Canadian Comedian Quits

Marie Dressler Retires From Stage After 36 Years to Become "Realtor"

Marie Dressler, the Canadian-born comedienne, is definitely swearing off entertaining as a business after thirty-six years on the stage. She is going to the south and plans to grow up with the country.

She has become a real estate go-getter, with maps, plans of subdivisions, architectural drawings and a smart array of arguments.

Not even love or matrimony is to be permitted to interfere with her career, she declares.

"I shall not marry until I am seventy," is her decision, "since I couldn't get bothered with a husband at present. At seventy I shall marry a nice young man of thirty and settle down."

For twenty-eight years Miss Dressler's name has twinkled among the stars. Perhaps the secret of her success has been that she takes everything humorously—everything, that is, except real estate.

Lady Peel Has Ideas As to Scion's Future

"I have made up my mind that my son, Bobby—he's four and a half now—shall follow whatever career he selects for himself, when he is old enough to choose," says the Canadian actress, Beatrice Lillie, who is Lady Peel in private life.

"I don't want him to be an actor, though. My private hope is that he will develop some of the famous Peel brains and one day—who knows?—be a great statesman."

"Bobby has a marvelous memory, and he is very keen on music. He hums all sorts of tunes after hearing them just once."

"At the moment Bobby is devoted to beetles and earwigs—crawling things appeal to his youthful mind. But if there is any suggestion of his becoming a naturalist, I shall shout vigorously 'Over my dead body!' in approved parental style."

"He takes a great deal of interest in my theatrical work, but only likes me if I look nice! He hates me to appear unlike the mother he sees at home. Whenever I come on to perform some character part he dives below the edge of the box, and lies flat on the floor till I go off."

Fishing Boat Blows Up; Crew Makes Safe Escape

HYACINTHIE HAY, B.C., Nov. 14.—The seafaring Samjo, while engaged in fishing off Reid Island at Yucletaw Rapids, near Valdes Island, was blown up, the owner, Captain Chutts, and crew of five men narrowly escaping with their lives. It was learned here tonight, the boat is a total loss. From the meagre information received it is understood the accident was caused by a gasoline explosion.

Mistress—You can have this hat, Heron—No, I shall not wear it again. Her Maid—That is very kind of you, mum. It's the very one my young man likes me in best.

POLA NEGRI

In "Flower of Night," latest Paramount release, the feature attraction at the Capitol Theatre all this week.

Pola Negri's Berlin-Made Film Cost U.S. $2,000,000

Mlle. Cecilia Sorel, of the Comedie Francaise Theatre, is to pit her art against that of Pola Negri, Mrs. Leslie Carter, and the long line of actresses who have portrayed Mme. Du Barry on the stage and screen.

Mlle. Sorel has disguised the German-made film of the Countess Du Barry's story, in which Pola Negri appeared, as commonplace, lacking in refinement, and full of historical inaccuracies and improbabilities. The fact that the German film made something like $2,000,000 in the United States, she said, filled her with confidence regarding the success of the French picture.

One advantage of which Mlle. Sorel is counting is the co-operation of her fellow players from the Comedie Francaise, who, she declared, "are the personification of classical elegance and tradition. Such films, in which the stately costumes of bygone ages are worn, must be turned out here in France and by our own actors. Only those who have been able to live with such historical characters in spirit can wear their costume as if it belonged to them and not as if it had been assumed for a special purpose. The Americans don't understand a thing about it."

Fourteen Persons Missing

MANILA, Nov. 14.—Fear of lives of ten soldiers of the Philippine Constabulary and four civilians, was expressed today in a telegram received at Constabulary headquarters here from the commander of the organization in Tabayas province. The party has been missing three weeks. The men left Cataman in a small boat October 22 for Uler and have not been heard from since. It is feared that their boat may have been manacred by savages.

Coliseum's Bill to Include Byng Boys

Special Feature Announced for Present Week—Noteworthy Musical Offerings

The Byng Boys are at the Coliseum Monday and the rest of the week—"The Byng Boys in Barcelona." Regular patrons will picture the comedy when Will Marshall and George Olsen team up as the Byng Boys with George Byron and the picturesque bandit who betrays them. The scenery, too, will prove appealing, depicting a colorful bandit's lair in the heart of the mountains.

All that is left to complete the show is music, and when it is pointed out there are fourteen musical numbers, and everybody in the cast has a solo part, it will be realized that it is a "super" show. Eiva Hart has a song, just out from London, "Millions of Men," which it is declared will take Victoria by storm and be on everybody's lips before the week is over. Ruth Hamilton, who appears in one of those parts in which she has made a name for herself, that of a comedy maid, also has a good song. May Rodwell and Gladys Burton, the two delightful singers who joined the company recently, contribute to the feast of gaiety and melody, and then there is the popular weekly comedy, "Felix the Cat," and the second of the series of pictures that have been headed at the Coliseum for the winter.

Facts and Fancies of Filmdom

Edwards Davis Added to "Ben Hur" Fred Nido, who has been engaged in the creation of "Ben Hur" for the screen for the past two years has added Edwards Davis to the exceptional cast. Mr. Davis has assumed the important character of Gratius, whose accidental death in the play results in numerous difficulties for "Ben Hur." who is accused of murdering him.

Frank Lloyd's "Road" The "Splendid Road," titled, edited and cut to eight reels. "Frank Lloyd" recently sailed from Victoria on the Empress of Australia for a vacation to be spent in China, Japan, Korea and Hawaii. "The Splendid Road" will be given its first public showings in the first week of December, and in the meantime the members of the cast have scattered in many directions. Anna Q. Nilsson has gone to New York to play opposite Lewis R. Stone in "Too Much Money." Robert Frazer is busy in his laboratory. Lionel Barrymore and Marjorie Day are active in the "Barrymore" Edward Earle has gone to the "Trent." George Bancroft has taken up a long term contract with the Lasky Company, and Edwards Davis is playing in "Ben Hur." Indeed, "The Splendid Road" leads many ways.

Exploit Steel Industry Three private carloads of "screen fame" rolled out of the Pennsylvania station, New York, recently, headed for the South and six weeks of hard work. The exodus marked the beginning of his new production, "Men of Steel," in which Milton Sills will be starred with Doris Kenyon. The destination was Birmingham, Ala. Initial scenes for the picture will be staged in the steel mills there. "Men of Steel" is a romance of the steel mills, and will follow the making of steel from the ore mines to the finished product. The story was written by Sills himself after an exhaustive study of steel mills throughout the country.

"Patriation" or "Casar's Wife" "Patriation" has been selected as the title for the next picture starring Corinne Griffith, originally called "Casar's Wife," a story by W. Somerset Maugham. Miss Griffith has completed work on this production. "Patriation" is said to offer Miss Griffith a role unlike anything she has had in the past, and to present a story particularly strong in its development from a motion picture.

Gifted Pianist Is Giving Recital

MRS. G. H. GREEN has the first time since her return from Europe more than a year ago give a complete recital for a Victoria audience. The occasion is one of the most looked-forward-to events of the musical season. The concert will take place at the Congregational Church, November 26, under the auspices of the Men's Guild of Christ Church Cathedral, and the programme which Mrs. Green has prepared will be completely new to the majority of Victorians, with the exception of one or two "request" numbers which the pianist has consented to include. There is a further interest in the forthcoming recital by Mrs. Green, as it is understood it will be the only opportunity which Victoria will have to hear her in her own programme before she leaves for the East in the new year.

standing. The National release date set for "Patriation" is December 13.

War on Term "Flapper" The war of the Camp Fire Girls against the use of the term "flapper" is growing to impressive proportions, and bids fair to overshadow any previous feminine conflict waged in behalf of the modern girl, judging from important enrollments in this new cause made known today. Colleen Moore, who is field-marshal of the nation-wide crusade to quash the word "flapper" for all time as being odious and unfair, and substitute "modern" and more suitable and descriptive name for the up-to-date girl of ambition and ideals, let it be known that the students of leading girls' colleges of America are enthusiastically throwing in their lot with the Camp Fire Girls, among them being Vassar, Wellesley and Mary Mount.

First Woman Producer Arrives The only woman ever actually to undertake the production of motion pictures has launched her first picture, "The Splendid Road," which she has long been noted as a writer, both for the stage and screen. Her plays and scenarios during the past few years have won her a reputation for success, both from the public and the box office viewpoints. Her royalties probably have exceeded those of any writer woman in the world. And now, having amassed a sizeable fortune, she has elected to become her own producer. She will adapt the stories she pictures.

Mental Attitude and Fat Dorothy Mackall is in no danger as yet of breaking her present contract, as a result of the anti-fat clause. This stipulates that she must hold her weight within the 135-pound limit. She arrived in New York from the West recently, and her slender figure at the time she signed the contract. And, as a result, she was immediately "fired" from the "Fat" role at First National Pictures studio. The title of the picture has not yet been announced. The anti-fat clause in Miss Mackall's contract has proven so successful that the company is incorporating it in all contracts granted to female film players. And to assist them in staying within the prescribed weight limit, it has installed gymnasiums in all its studios. Gym work always helps, but Miss Mackall attributes the major credit in her victory over the fatty enemy to the hard work she did in her last production, "Joanna." "The mental attitude has a lot to do with it, I think," she chuckled, "and hard work kept my mind off of fatness."

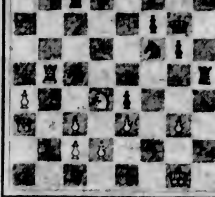

Roy Stewart Opposite Mary Pickford Roy Stewart has hung up his chaps, spurs and sombrero and reported to Mary Pickford in his regular business clothes to play her sweetheart in "Scraps," which William Beaudine is directing. "Scraps" offers Mr. Stewart his first "straight" lead in several years, and although he has always appeared in the constructive, bulldozer type of cowboy in his memorable Western pictures, he has nevertheless become a "type" to a certain extent, and his selection from a score of athletic young screen players to become Miss Pickford's male lead gives him the chance to break away. Now, Roy is determined to let the moths feast on his cowpuncher's suit while he keeps busy in the drawing-room and the business offices of future screen plays. Stewart's last starring picture was "Rundown." He is six feet two inches tall, and a veteran of stage and screen.

Chess Notes

The annual meeting of the council of the British Chess Federation was held at the rooms of the City of London Chess Club, with Canon Gordon Ross, president, in the chair.

The report of the delegates to the International Chess Federation at present are: American C. C. League, Argentina, Republic, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, France, Germany, Great Britain, Holland, Hungary, Italy, Roumania, Switzerland and Germany.

A committee, with Commander Milinski (Italy) chairman, was appointed to consider the establishment of an international code of chess laws.

A group contest between Great Britain, Belgium, France and Holland, with teams of ten players a side, was suggested by the international president and agreed to with enthusiasm by the council.

We are indebted to Mr. Leonard P. Ross, hon. sec., St. Aubyns, Reading, Surrey, for a copy of the B.C.F. report.

The Chess Bulletin announces that Dr. E. M. Lasker has decided to visit America again, arriving January 15, to deliver a series of lectures on the game.

Barry, of the Boston Transcript, suggests that the doctor might know more about the game than even Morphy, and reporters aver that masters even watch his elevated board with a rapt look as if they expected the "heavens to open and show divinity, creating worlds."

In 1483 a Muscovite embassy to Louis XIV. consisting of two boys and fifty men, visited Paris. A contemporary French account praises their skill at chess, and declared that our best players are mere scholars in comparison with them.

Peter the Great was a good player for his time, and in Murray's "History of Chess" we read that Paul I. during his visit to Paris, 1741-2, paid a visit incognito to the cafe de la Regence, then the headquarters of French chess, and won a wager over the right move in a difficult game he was watching.

The nineteenth century saw a succession of brilliant Russian players and writers.

"Splendid!" said she, as he slipped the "splendid" ring in her finger.

"Splendid!" you've hit on my favorite stone, which is more than any of the others ever did."

"It's the one I always use," said he.

APPLY SAGE TEA

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant.

Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use for only 15 cents. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wavy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxurious. Portugal's Debt to Britain

LISBON, Portugal, Nov. 14.—The government has decided to appoint three delegates to negotiate the liquidation of Portugal's war debt to Great Britain.

Many Millions of Dollars Bequeathed To Former Bellhop

BOISE, Idaho, Nov. 14.—Mr. Thomas Franklyn Manville, formerly a bellhop in the Idanha Hotel here, has fallen heir to the millions of his father, Thomas Franklyn Manville, the "asbestos king," according to information that has reached Boise.

Accompanied by his mother, Mr. Thomas Franklyn Manville, Jr., came to Boise in 1919. Mrs. Manville started divorce proceedings against her husband. The senior Manville cut off the allowance of mother and son, and Thomas Franklyn, Jr., was forced to find work to support himself and mother. He was successful at a transfer company, but only remained several weeks before a packing box fell on his foot. He then went to the Idanha Hotel, where his mother was living, and secured employment as bellhop and elevator boy. Later, accompanied by his mother, he returned to New York.

An estimate of between $25,000,000 and $35,000,000 was put in the estate of Mr. Manville, and the principal legatees are Mrs. Lorraine Manville, Gould, of the Hotel Plaza, his daughter, and Thomas Franklyn Manville, of the Hotel Roosevelt, his son. Each gets one-half.

Women Win

New charm, new beauty by a morning drink

Do you realize how much beauty, how much charm depends on inner cleanliness?

Do you know how poisons and wastes in the system affect your complexion, your fitness, your vivacity?

Then do this in the morning—or any time—when you know that poisons need elimination. Drink a glass of water, hot or cold. Add a little Jad Salts. It will make a sparkling drink.

The effect is to flush the intestines in a way pleasant, prompt and gentle. Results usually appear in an hour. And they come from the salts of lemon and grape combined with lithia, etc.

Don't wait for delayed effects. Keep your bowels correct, wrong conditions quickly.

Let a trial of Jad Salts show what this means to you. Ask your druggist for Jad Salts today.

A London Letter

Young Canadian Artists Competing in Motherland, Where Season in the Metropolis Promises to Be Very Interesting to Art Lovers—Miss Lottie Venn, at Seventy-Four Years of Age, Scores Great Triumph

By Elizabeth Montzambert

The protracted St. Martin's Summer London is enjoying at the moment has kept the parks and gardens miraculously green, and even the dahlias beds on the north side of the park are still attracting admiring visitors. Trafalgar Square still looks as if it were in the hands of the house-breakers, for the works in connection with a new underground station have given the authorities a good excuse for replacing the old asphalt with stone slabs. They have erected a little brick house in the middle of the square, which rather looks as if their work were going to last forever, but one hopes that before next season Nelson will once more look down across a place unmarred by the presence of stone masonry.

It is pleasant to notice how many young Canadians are coming over to measure themselves against the achievements of their countrymen in the Motherland. Next week Miss Halkett, the young Canadian pianist, is giving a concert at the Grotto Hall, in Wigmore Street, and I have just heard that Mr. Graham Norwell, the Canadian artist who had a picture exhibition last year, is having a sale of his work this week, prior to establishing himself in a South Kensington studio. Mr. Norwell has already attained some success over here. Last week he sold two large Canadian pictures to the Right Honorable Neville Chamberlain, Minister of Health.

The autumn season promises to be a very interesting one for the art lover. The International Society will open an exhibition at the Royal Academy on November 7. It will be truly international this year, including a section of German art of the most modern type, including work by Klimsch, Marie Caspar-Flier, G. Koibe, Edvard Kuri and Aug. Gail. The French Government is sending over a wonderful collection of pictures from the Musée de Luxembourg, including examples of the work of Lucien Simon, Cotte and Besnard, as well as Pissarro, Chavannes, Monet, Begas, Renoir and the more modern Maurice Denis.

Another small but very interesting picture show was held last Sunday at the Claridge Gallery, when Honor Fruna, the young Spanish artist who designed the setting for the ballet Les Matelots, exhibited his pictures. The Claridge Gallery has the distinction of being run by one of the most energetic women in London, Mrs. Machias, one of the few women who can go and look at her portrait in the National Gallery, for she is one of the celebrated Wertheimer family painted by Begas.

A week or two ago I was writing on the mystery of lost manuscripts, but now, when the works of art are an even more frequent phenomenon. The recent death in Italy of the workman who stole the Mona Lisa recalls that extraordinary and never fully explained or explained event, and at the moment London is waiting for the return from the other side of the world of one of the ivory statues which used to be in the Library of the House of Commons and then disappeared, no one knows how or why. After this foggy they are drifting back one by one to their old home, discovered and bought by generous travelers. No one knows who carved these wonderful little figures with the coat opening to disclose three delicately carved scenes. Two of the statues are of Charles I, the third of Oliver Cromwell, the fourth, now on its way home, is of Charles II. The two still missing are of Mary Queen of Scots, one with the tale of her execution carved on the inside panels, the other depicting the murder of Rizzio.

London is certainly the home of the most generous people in the world. If one may judge by the prodigious number of appeals to help someone or something that are made almost every day in the week and never without receiving some support. One is glad to hear of something designed to help their own people, which has just been started by an appeal committee with Lady Bertha Dawkins as chairman, to raise a sum of money before the end of November to build a Club Home near Sunningdale for gentlemen of moderate means. Everyone who knows of the distress caused by the increased cost of living to gentlemen of moderate means will sympathize with this effort to provide a home for their declining years.

Croaking playwrights and critics who say that the London theatre is on the downward grade have not been so vociferous lately, and as a matter of fact the number of good plays now running in London is unusually large. The manager who thinks that good plays don't pay is having it slowly borne into his inner consciousness by ocular proof that "The Cherry Orchard," "The Seagull," "The Idiot," "The Playboy of the Western World," "The Man With a Load of Mischief," "Hamlet," "The Beagull," "Bum Up," and even the abominably long "Man and Superman," have all made a decided appeal to a public that was supposed to care for nothing but "No, No, Nanette" and "Rose Marie," while for the vast mass of theatregoers who are neither high nor low-brow there are such entertaining ways of spending the evening as "The Cuckoo in the Nest," "Ilay Fever," "Cristina," "Beginners' Luck," "The Last of Mrs. Chaney" and "The Unfair Sex." I paid a visit to the Savoy last week and thoroughly enjoyed the last mentioned play. Mr. Basil Foster and Miss Rowland Courtneidge repeat their former triumph, and the ridiculous situations lose none of their piquancy by the clever acting of Miss Athene Seyler. The success of "The Seagull" has encouraged Mr. Philip Hildgeway to plan the production of two more Tchekov plays, and "Uncle Vanya" may be seen in the near future.

The theatrical event of the week has been the production by Mr. Nigel Playfair of a comic opera in three acts by Isaac Bickertaffe, the eighteenth century dramatic author, with music by Dibdin, rearranged by Alfred Reynolds. It is perfectly amazing that this little masterpiece should have been neglected for so long. It needed a genius like Mr. Nigel Playfair to revive this charming and neglected opera. Everything about it is delightful. The music is tuneful and Dibdin's airs, for some of which he made acknowledged use of the work of contemporary Italian composers, were deftly interwoven with compositions of Mr. Alfred Reynolds, so eighteenth century in feeling that the result was a harmonious whole. Mr. Norman Wilkinson had designed the costumes and scenery with his usual skill and it is difficult to find words to express the ability with which Mr. Nigel Playfair has produced the opera.

No one could possibly cavil at the applause which greeted the appearance of the most astonishing actress on the English stage. I have paid so many tributes already to the art of

Home of Eight Rooms Designed to Utilize Stock Sizes to Insure Low Cost and Neat Appearance

THE design pictured here is an example of how attractive a home can be made when architecturally designed. It will cost no more to build than any other house of the same size and yet it will command a considerably higher selling price in comparison with the poorly designed home. Although most houses of this area have only six rooms, this plan provides eight, because every inch of space has been utilized—the gable roof making a good solution for obtaining two large bedrooms with good head room, as well as adding considerably to the appearance of the exterior.

Although the house was designed to take advantage of stock sizes, and economy of floor space, to insure low cost of construction, the appearance of the exterior has not been overlooked. The perspective drawing of the elevation will give you an idea of how charming the house will look when completed, with its nice roof lines, proper proportions and attractive latticed porch.

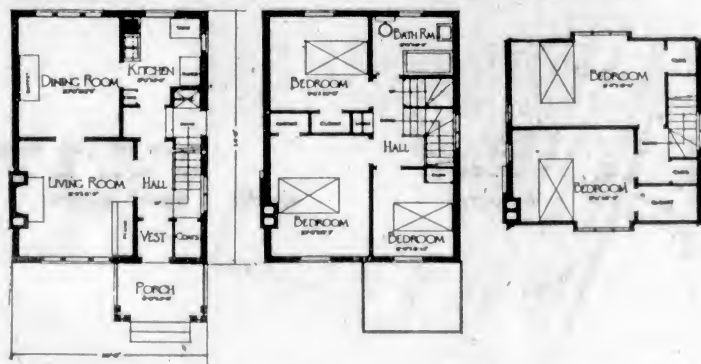

The floor plans are an example of what study and experience can do in using every inch of space. Although the plan only covers 620 square feet, this house provides eight good rooms of much larger size, with better accommodation for furniture, than most houses of a much larger area. On the first floor we have a 6 feet by 9 feet 6 inches porch that does not rob the living-room of light, a vestibule with coat-room and a well lighted hall. The living-room has a triple window in the front, with a rug brick fireplace on the side. The dining-room is well lighted, too—of correct proportions for modern dining-room furniture—with a double action service door to kitchen. The compact kitchen is the kind everyone wants nowadays—planned to lighten housework, liberally supplied with cupboards over the sink, and broom closet—well lighted with windows on two sides. The ideal, though economical, service entrance on the side gives direct access to full-size basement from outside, as well as inside, and has space provided for refrigerator just beside the kitchen door.

Repairs the generous wall space for furniture should be noted, because many plans overlook this important feature. All of the bedrooms are well lighted, with roomy clothes closets. The hall is well lighted, too, and has built-in linen cupboards within two steps of any bedroom and the bathroom. The position of the bathroom is directly over the kitchen, and is laid out so that the water pipes rise on interior walls—a small but important detail in extremely cold weather. The two bedrooms in the attic each have extra large closet room, and there is an additional clothes closet in the upstairs hall.

The outside measurements of the house are 29 feet by 25 feet, which enables you to build it on a 25-foot lot if desired.

Miss Lottie Venn, and her fame is so well established among theatregoers on both sides of the ocean, that further praise would be superfluous. She is now seventy-four years of age and she could easily give most of the younger actresses a big handicap and leave them far behind. She and Miss Ilaidee Wright are two of the biggest artists on the English stage today.

"Harold, you tiresome boy!" exclaimed mother. "You came home in an awful state at dinner time and after I cleaned and tidied you up you run off and have another fight." "But that's not right, mother. It was the same fight. We only knocked off for dinner!"

B. C. Carries Off Prizes At Toronto

Numerous Cattle and Fruit Awards Won by Coast Exhibitors at Winter Exhibition

TORONTO, Nov. 13. — British Columbia dairy herds took a large portion of the awards at the Royal Winter Fair, which was officially opened yesterday. In apples British Columbia also held its own, and took much of the prize money. Coldstream Ranch, Vernon, B.C., won first for ten boxes of Apples and second for ten boxes of Newtons and five boxes of Rome Beauty. In each of these latter two classes the Associated Growers of Vernon took the first prize, and Mr. F. E. R. Woolston, Vernon, third, thereby sweeping all the prize money for the Pacific Province.

Associated Growers also took first for twenty boxes of Delicious. All classes are not yet judged, and British Columbia is expected to win most of the prizes in the commercial classes. Against heavy competition from the oldest established herds in Ontario, B.C. Jersey breeders scored heavily in the classes judged today. George Banger, Victoria, won fifth for senior yearling heifer. Other B.C. winners were: Charles Anteman, Vancouver; A. W. McIntyre, Chilliwack; J. W. McGillivray, Ashley; E. H. Burton, Chilliwack, and David Spencer, Vancouver. Other prizes won by Western entries were: Ayrshire awards, bull, senior calf class, second prize, E. A. Wells, B.C.; Cow, under four years, in milk class, first, A. E. Wells, B.C.; Guernsey awards, heifer, senior yearling class, first prize, Brantford Bros., Chilliwack, B.C.; Jersey awards, bull, junior yearling, second prize, J. Hepburn, Chilliwack, B.C.

Helpful Advice to Overworked Women

DAY in and day out, week in and week out the tired, overworked housewife and mother toils on, sweeping, dusting, cooking, cleaning and mending. Is it any wonder that after a time a weakness, such as Mrs. Chapman had, develops and the wife and mother pays a toll in physical weakness and pain for her efforts of love, the natural result of overwork!

Women who find themselves afflicted with weakness, pain, headaches, backache, nervousness, irritability and melancholia will be interested in Mrs. Chapman's letter, and should realize that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is especially adapted to overcome such conditions.

Mrs. Chapman's Letter Reads as Follows:
New Albany, Ind.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a weakness which many women have from over work, and from which I suffered for quite a while. I want to tell you my work and my sister advised me to take this medicine. After the first few days the pain was not so severe as they had been and after taking a few bottles I am no longer any more. I am doing my housework every day and highly recommend the Vegetable Compound to any woman suffering from female trouble. Only yesterday a friend called me on the phone and knowing what it did for me wanted to know what to ask for at the drug store, so she meant to give it a trial."—Mrs. C. E. CHAPMAN, 1290 Elm Street, New Albany, Indiana.

Another Case of Nervous Breakdown
Macon, Ga.—"I was always feeling tired and heavy, with a weakness of the back and pain in my right side, and I had a nervous breakdown. A friend was taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she gave me half a bottle to try. It did me so much good that I have been taking it ever since whenever I feel the least bit of nervousness or so without taking it, but when I feel the least headache, or any other bad feeling, I just make for that bottle. I recommend it for any female trouble, and very few of my friends are without it in their homes."—Mrs. J. CARMICHAEL, 381 Third Avenue, Macon, Ga.

Lundy Awaits Its New "King"

Rugged Island in Bristol Channel Is Again for Sale to Highest Bidder—Has Long and Strange History

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Taxation is such an uncomfortable companion of all who live in England that unusual interest has been aroused over the announcement that Lundy Island, a rugged spot in Bristol Channel, only a comfortable day's ride from London, where taxes are unknown and where the owner exercises all the authority of a king, is for sale. The island, which is three miles long and a half mile wide, has a picturesque and virile history.

More than one prominent business man has been credited by rumor with a desire to become possessed of the island, which carries with it title to all the land, except that occupied by two lighthouses and by the church, as a retreat where contact with the outer world and its distractions can be ruthlessly cut off. Although the island is unrecognised by the imperial taxation authorities, the owner is empowered to charge the Government rent for the postoffice, collect a few pounds from the Admiralty for the use of the lookout station, and charge the Board of Trade £2 a year for its rocket house and £1 for rights of way.

Seabirds Gather Here
Lundy is chiefly known for its inexhaustible supplies of granite, some of which was used in building the Victoria Embankment in London, and for its tremendous flocks of seabirds, including thousands of puffins, whose mid-world name—Lunde—accounts for the island's title. The island is an impressive-looking place, with cliffs that rise sheer from the sea to a height of from 100 to 200 feet. There is only one landing place, which is in a small, sheltered bay at the south-east corner.

Deception Discovered
In its long and strange history the island has been occupied by Ancient Britons, Normans, Spaniards, French privateers, Turkish pirates, and English adventurers and smugglers. There are massive stone walls on the island which were erected in the eighteenth century by convicts who had been sentenced to transportation for life to Australia.

The shipmaster, however, who had the contract for carrying these convicts overseas called only as far as Lundy and landed his passengers. When the deception was discovered, he shipmaster, whose name was Benson, fled to Portugal. Later a large quantity of smuggled goods was found on the island in a place called Benson's Cave. The island was last on the market about twenty-five years ago and was then sold for £30,000.

Outside Movie Scenes In California Spoiled By Real Estate Men

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Nov. 12.—Real estate subdividers are spoiling some of filmdom's choicest and least expensive "sets."

Only a few years ago hills within walking distance of the studios furnished an excellent background for Western thrillers, in which the sheriff's posse chased gunmen into fastnesses of "canyons" apparently seven or eight miles from a railroad. These hills are now so criss-crossed with residential streets as to be worthless for "Wild West" work.

For a time a quaint sea coast village on the ocean near Santa Monica furnished convenient Old World atmosphere for the company that built it, but today it is forgotten in the crush of modern beach cottages usurping its site.

Now comes word that a stretch of magnificent sand dunes on the coast north of here, much photographed during the recent vogue of desert sheik films, has been acquired by a syndicate for subdivision as a new beach resort. Cameramen in search of Arabia and Sahara will have to go farther afield.

Famous Players Canadian Corporation Makes Better Showing

Some increase in both earnings and net profits of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, says The Financial Post, is shown in the sixth annual report. Comparative figures from the profit and loss account follow:

The balance sheet discloses an increase in mortgages on theatre properties of $127,000. This increase arises from the assumption of a mortgage in connection with the purchase of an additional property in Ottawa. This account now stands at $733,996. Other mortgages have been reduced by $73,000 during the year; theatre properties are valued at $5,227,295, as compared with $5,142,321; franchises, contracts, leaseholds, etc., are carried at $8,617,130; investments in affiliated companies, $489,685; advances to affiliated companies, $216,612; accounts receivable stand at $186,461, against $135,707; cash on hand, $264,742, and deferred charges, $281,237; accounts payable are shown at $141,739, against $181,464.

Dangers to Radium Workers

By DR. MORRIS FISHEIN
(Copyright, 1925, by North American Newspaper Alliance)

NOT many years ago there appeared on the market for the first time watches with dials that could be seen by night. Because of their usefulness they received immediate popularity and, indeed, served conspicuously under war conditions. In 1924, physicians in the Harvard School of Public Health, Boston, were asked to investigate certain cases of an unusual character that had occurred in girls and women making such watches. In the cases of several of the girls the tissue of the jaw had begun to degenerate, and the course of the condition was so severe that several of the girls died, regardless of the best medical attention that could be promptly given to them. It was found that these degenerations, instead of remaining localized and healing as do ordinary infections of the jaw, proceeded to the point where the bone rotted away completely, and, indeed, resembling nothing so much as a familiar condition suffered many years ago by workers in the match industry who were constantly exposed to phosphorus.

Reprehensible Practice
When investigators began their study they found that the girls charged with painting the dials with luminous paint used a solution containing zinc sulphide, with small traces of copper and of radium bromide. The paint is applied with a fine brush, and it was the universal practice of the girls to point their brushes by putting them in their mouths. It was not conceivable that the small amounts of copper had any relation to the disease, and the investigators were able to eliminate zinc as a source of the disturbance, particularly since recent investigations of the zinc industry had not revealed any similar disturbance among workers exposed to large amounts of this metal. Zinc workers do, however, suffer with other industrial disturbances.

The effects of radium on animals and on men have been studied by many physicians. The important symptoms of over-exposure to this substance are disturbances of the male and female sex organs, and changes in the skin and in the blood. These conditions occur in persons exposed to the radium externally, but not in such a way as to have any of the radium itself in their bodies. Physicians who have exposed the tissue to radium or to X-rays, have found that these things have a definite effect on bone tissue.

Effects of X-Rays
Exposure to X-rays will disturb the growth of the bone, and if sufficiently penetrating will delay or prevent the uniting of parts of a fractured bone by interfering with the formation of new bone substance. It was found also that there were records of destruction of the tissue of the jaw by radium used to attack cancer of the tongue. It, therefore, appeared to be definitely established that the only constituent of the luminous paint which might do the harm was the radium.

In pursuing their inquiry, the investigators made studies with photographic plates of the amount of zinc sulphide dust containing radium which was present in the rooms of the watch manufacturing plant. It was found that the hair, faces, hands, arms, necks, dresses, underclothing, and even the crests of the dial painters contained luminous material. One of the girls showed luminous spots on the legs and thighs, and the back of another girl was luminous almost to the waist. In other words, a sufficient amount of radium-containing dust was loose so that at no time was the skin of the girls free from the radium-containing material. As might be expected, the constant exposure to radium had definite effects on the persons working in the rooms.

Plan to Protect Workers
Twenty-two were examined, and the blood of none of them was normal. Indeed, many showed the characteristic of exposure to radium or X-rays in excessive amounts. Plans were developed by the investigators for protecting the workers in these industries from this unusual industrial hazard. Hereafter the radium-containing material will be mixed and manipulated under chemical hoods by operators who wear gloves, and the process will take place in a room entirely separate from any workrooms. The workers will wear high-necked, long-sleeved work aprons, which will be washed weekly. They will be re-

Cherished Possessions: Can

Candlesticks and Other Things

□                  □                  □

By John Hosie

MY Brittany candlestick, over whose shattered pieces un-

lines, and that indefinable something in which, even in the illiterate, betokens a gentleman. The squire to whom he doffed his cap was his inferior in many ways, so was the parson, for both were booted men and enobled, and patronised the poor. He naturally cherishes greatly old Hodge's gift, not for what it is but for what it stands for—an expression of the simple, un-questioning love of a plain, honest soul whom I only knew for the brief space of a year), who lived and died in the same lowly cottage in which he was born, and whose name was unknown beyond the confines of the small moorland parish where he labored for upwards of seventy years and died a pauper.

On rare occasions only have I burnt a candle in the Britanny candlestick; once on the night on which I was said to have paid through the nose for it, once when I received the intelligence of an unexpected increase of salary and could not sleep; once or twice on returnings home late from a banquet or something and the electric light was nowhere to be found; and once when I sat on through the night wrestling with a short story which was to put all the masters of the short story in the shade (but which did no such thing, having been conceived in conceit and foredoomed to an ignominious end). And tonight I will light another candle to celebrate the rehabilitation of the broken scotch, and I will take me down a veteran pipe from old Hodge's pipe-rack, and so I will sit and muse until the faint quiver of the candle—and perhaps ghostly faces will come to me through the smoke—old Hodge's, with its expansive smile, and the waltzy face of me long of the stinger.

HIG BOY

By COURTNEY RYLEY COOPER
Illustrations by Lorenz C. Braren

MONKEY meant a good deal to the Captain and now he had a chance to make $50,000—and a crafty woman knew it.

"Curse sort of rain," said Cap'n Most of the Lady West as he fumbled about at the entrance to his cabin. "Mind now until I find the switch. It's a new trick he's got, turning out the lights."

He fumbled again against the cabin wall, while from deeper within the darkness there sounded a soft cooing. This followed by a shuffling sound, and a bumping against the floor. Then Cap'n Most found the switch, the small light displaying a tiny cabin.

An old-fashioned, red-plush patent rocker still moved slowly from the action of something which had just departed from it. In the center of the floor, a grotesque, hairy thing stood on all fours, his forearms straight and extended in front of him upon black, bent knuckles, the heavy pent-house over his long life pursed in a cooing of welcome as he looked up with almost childlike amiability toward the stony captain and the larger, more fleshily dressed man who accompanied him. Cap'n Most gestured awkwardly.

"Now, Mr. . . .," he began.

"Ainsworth, Cap'n," supplied the other man. "Jim Ainsworth."

"That's right. That's right, Ainsworth. Ain't natch on remembering names. But," he scraped at his throat with an expulsion of breath, "there he is, just like I said you'd find him. Found in limb and today. Good and tame, too."

Jim Ainsworth, of the Great Ainsworth Show, nodded and pulled again at his cigar.

"He's a gorilla, all right," came finally. Cap'n rubbed his hands.

"That's what I thought. That's what they told me."

"Yep," Jim Ainsworth extended his cigar. "Gorilla. Them ridges over his eyes, and the way the hair grows on his forehead. Out as a pompadour. If you'll ever notice when he gets mad, they stick straight up and twitch."

"So?" Then Cap'n Most shook his head. "I ain't ever seen him mad."

"That's a good trait. 'Bout five years old, I reckon."

"Something like that. Let's see. I bought him in Cape Lopez off a nigger about a year and a half ago. He said he was a little over three then. Yeh, I guess there's no doubt about that. Thought about selling him before, only this is the first time I've touched here. China trade, you know."

"Yeh?" Then Jim Ainsworth nudged again at his cigar. "What's his name?"

"Big Boy," said Cap'n Most, and gave one of his few indications of a smile. "The crew named him that after an apprentice we had. All muscle and no brains. Every time they wanted anything done they'd call for Big Boy. Didn't know any more to do everybody's work. He's kind of that way."

The cap'n nodded toward the huddled gorilla.

"It's a way they have. Like to do what humans do. Crazy about human; them apes. Usually fasten to one person. Like with you. Funny how attached you get to 'em, yourself."

Cap'n Most rubbed his chin.

"Oh, I don't know. I never thought much about it. An animal's just an animal to me."

Jim Ainsworth puffed again.

"That's good—from your standpoint, because they're one of those ships where they're kind of looked on it as home, they die pretty easy. Just like condemnin' 'em to sell 'em. I always like to be shuffled on those things. Raves a lot of trouble afterward. What're you holding him for?"

A slight sparkle came into the blue-grey eyes of Cap'n Most, the trader instinct to the fore.

"Now, that's something to talk about. What would you say?"

"Got me on bad ground there," he puffed slowly, still regarding the hairy beast, which at last had gone to the cap'n, raised its long, thin hands, fondled the freckled, stubby ones of Cap'n Most in unrecognition, affection, laid his heavy head and grotesque lips against the cap'n's chest and shuffled to grovel, half fearful of the visitor, in a corner. "I don't know just what to say. You see, there's never been but one gorilla in this country."

"So?" The sparkle became keener. "What'd they pay for him?"

"Well, to come clean, they paid around fifteen thousand. They said as the other man's eyes widened. "But you couldn't sell this for anything like that—not to anybody in the show business. That case was an experiment. First place, he's just like that first one. Too young. Ain't big enough yet to look fierce—any big chimp'd be a better attraction and a lot cheaper. Then there's the other angle—about him dying."

"Awful healthy, Mr. Ainsworth."

"Yeh. Here on the ship, but ships and shows are different things. These apes—they're just like us. Look on a cage like we look on a jail. Takes all the heart out of 'em. What's a monkey or a wild man? He's got a change of climate—they're down in the mouth and grilling, and not caring specially whether they bump or not, and the best thing a guy knows, he's out of a job. Nope. I wouldn't give more'n a couple of grand for him."

"That's how much? Two thousand dollars?"

"Yeh. I'd be taking a risk at that. Young like this—people don't care nothing about species. What's the name? I could show 'em him. I was black in the face, and it wouldn't do any good. They'd rather see a good python or a bunk wild man. Take 'em now, he'd live about six weeks, and I wouldn't get my money out of him. But," Jim Ainsworth hitched suddenly forward in the patent rocker, "tell you what I'll do. I'll give you five hundred bucks and take an option on him, when he's ten years old. He'd be an attraction then—the gorilla stuff out on him plain. Waigh three or four hundred—twice as big as anything else that's ever been on the road. He'd live longer than—might last a season. That'd be worth while. I could climb high on something like that. Around fifty grand."

Cap'n Most's blue-grey eyes narrowed and opened again. Fifty grand meant fifty thousand dollars. If that were the first offer.

"Tell you what I'll do," he said, after a long hour of argument had followed. "I'll think it over. I won't give you an option, but I won't sell him to anybody else unless they offer ten thousand more'n you. Now—"

It had been a long speech for Cap'n Most, "would that sound fair 'n aboveboard?"

Jim nodded.

"I guess it's the best I can get," he answered. "Now just remember what I've told you—a lot of this stuff about apes being fierce—they don't get that way unless they know they're in captivity. Him, he's just like a kid. Keep that up—make a pet of him."

Then they parted, Jim Ainsworth to go over the side, Cap'n Most to wander the white-scrubbed decks of the lumbering old Lady West for a long time, then to go below, where he sat and rocked, sat and rocked, while a cooling heat again came forward and crouched at his side, content in its adoption. At last the Cap'n took notice.

It brought great laughter from the others gathered about; that had been a silent joke for a long time about the skipper, paying his sidley court to a woman who wrote letters to him in her own chirography and to the chief engineer, upon a typewriter. They must have met. Nothing else could have caused that hurried exit of the chief; he was ordinarily a deliberate

Waitin' while I'm sailin' on the boundin' sea, Waitin' while I'm sailin' on the boundin' blue— But who's she a-waitin' for—me or you?"

It brought great laughter from the others gathered about; that had been a silent joke for a long time about the skipper, paying his sidley court to a woman who wrote letters to him in her own chirography and to the chief engineer, upon a typewriter. They must have met. Nothing else could have caused that hurried exit of the chief; he was ordinarily a deliberate walking craft below. The crew must have drawn a mournful note from his wheezy accordion, and improvised to the swinging delight of Big Boy.

"Oh, here's to a sweetheart, waitin' patiently."

Kohama, and Sydney, Honolulu and Vancouver, and once Seattle, but never San Francisco. Three years, four years, approaching five, and then, in Singapore, Captain Most received a letter.

It had followed him for more than six months, forwarded by the owners, and it bore style of writing which caused Captain Most to rub at his stubby chin and pucker his lips in a soundless whistle before he finally stuck a freckled finger under the flap and, followed as always by the silent, shuffling Big Boy, retired to the fastness of his cabin to read it.

Several times during that performance, he arose from the patent rocker, and punched at the electric switch, then stood regarding the incandescent above, though doubting its brilliancy. Each time he muttered something about the light, below, and there the conversation ended.

The world of the sea had become a thunderous thing of black and flashing green, revealing a stricken object which floundered frantically in craven-like tongs, fought upward against the towering walls of breaking water all about, then fell again to new depths and greater efforts. Lights were out, excepting one in the wheelhouse, and a faint gleam at the stern, dipping and rising away with sickening convulsions, dropping until it seemed the range must become perpendicular, then sweeping upward with unutterable swiftness, to gleam dully like some vagrant star in starless black ere it once more began its downward course again.

Again and again, Captain Most, on the bridge, gripping the rail in the darkness or giving with mincing steps before the heavy rolls, only to bring up short at the balance point, noticed that for the last five minutes the rise of the ship had brought no cessation of the propeller, but instead, a constantly increasing vibration which seemed to penetrate to the very heart of the stricken ship. He sagged, and stubby arms plying before him, staggered to the engine-room tube.

"Ain't that indicator working?" he snapped.

"Yeh, sir," came the faint voice, was mingled with the swish of pistons and the clanging of heavy steel. "Yeh, it's working, but—"

"Then why ain't you easing her over?" That propeller keeps right on going!"

like a vanquished thing, over its final atom of energy. Floundering and staggering, the captain made his slow way along, taking notice in blurred vision that shadows of the deck had disappeared, that in the lightning gaping stretches showed where the rail once had run uninterrupted. Awnings had departed; a life-raft, upon the bridge, watching, merely in the angry clutch of a wave which had torn it from its fastenings.

Between decks, and the crew suddenly knelt, lightly crouched, there was nothing to do but wait. Deeper, and into the engine-room, where struggling figures worked at the preparations for the pouring of babbling.

"She went out, sir," said the chief, "all at once, like milk pouring from a pitcher. We're trying to do something—but it won't work. It's off true, that shaft. I'll last out everything on us if we force it."

Cap'n Most nodded silently. There was nothing else to do. Harder and with more recklessness of motion, the Lady West bounded in a new burst of the tempest. Cap'n Most accepted it with a sudden hopelessness, not of self, but of soul. His ship was quitting him—quitting him when he needed her the most. Almost dazedly he made the deck. He did not notice a shuffling figure which had taken its place in his path, as he passed his cabin, and despite its frightened whimpering, stuck doggedly to the rocking, dangerous course. It was not until he had gained the bridge again, swinging there in plummet fashion with the directionless tossing of the boat, that Cap'n Most noticed something else clutching also at the rail, a roughened hand coming against his, a bulky body close beside him. A queer sensation came over Cap'n Most, a feeling that he could not understand. He looked a hand for just an instant, and extending it in searching fashion, patted the head of a giant beast—not the cooling that he recoiled, the lost in the rush of wind. Then he fought it all as a voice came out of the darkness, roaring against the hollow of the storming ship, lips close to the ears of the skipper.

"Marston, sir. Things look a bit bad forward. Stove in—this wrenching, sir."

The Quest for the Cup of Gold

By A. W. W.

IN the far distant land of Akbar lived a king who was known far and near because of the wisdom he displayed in ruling his kingdom. All his subjects, both old and young, loved and feared him because he was careful to recognize and reward all good deeds performed by his subjects; but he was also careful to punish all wrongdoers, whether of high or low degree. So he was known by all in the land as the Wise and Just King.

He had a son named Basil, the eldest of a family of four boys of whom the King was very fond, and he wished him to grow up to be a strong, manly man, as he would some day be called upon to rule the Kingdom of Akbar in his father's stead.

Now Basil was very ambitious, and wished to make a great name for himself in the world, and was very unhappy and discontented with the quiet and even life he was living in his father's well-ordered kingdom.

The King saw that his son was unhappy and discontented, so one morning in early summer, the King called his son to him as he sat under the large, spreading oak which grew in front of the palace, and asked him why he was not happy. Have you not all that you desire? Are not all my subjects kind and loyal to you? Are not all your wants ministered to? Why are you not happy?

"Because," replied his son, "I wish to make my name famous throughout the world, as yours, sire, is famous throughout your kingdom. But greatness cannot be found within your domain by such as I; one must go out into the world beyond the mountains and do some big thing. I have been told by wild men that somewhere I could find the Cup of Gold that lies at the foot of the rainbow. I would receive riches and honor, and be endowed with much wisdom."

"My son," said the King, "your ambition is a worthy one. Go, find the Cup of Gold, and return not hither until you have succeeded in your quest. If you do succeed, return, and I will give you the half of my kingdom, and you shall also be given the most beautiful Princess in all the land to be your wife."

Next morning, long before the sun had lighted the tops of the mountains, the Prince set out on his quest for the Cup of Gold. He walked steadily until nightfall, when he reached a beautiful valley; and there, under a large, spreading oak, he made a soft bed of leaves and spruce, and fell fast asleep, thinking of a part of his supply of food and drinking of the stream that flowed through the valley, he laid him down and was fast asleep.

In his sleep he had a vision. He saw a beautiful lady, who was clothed

Premiers of Canada

Who have been Premiers of Canada since Confederation? Is a question to which the young men and women of this generation should be able to give a correct answer.

Boys and girls of High School should, at least, know who leads the Government now and who it was that directed the policy of the Government of this country after Confederation made of the Provinces of British North America a united country.

A few weeks ago The Montreal Herald and Weekly Star compiled the following information for the benefit of its readers, and the paper passes it on hoping the older children will cut it out and keep it for reference.

Canada, since Confederation, has had eleven Federal Administrations, but only ten different Premiers, this being due to the fact that one Premier, Sir John A. Macdonald, was at the head of the Government, separated in point of time by almost five years. Sir John A. Macdonald was born in Glasgow, Scotland, on January 11, 1815; Alexander Mackenzie was born near Dundee, Perthshire, Scotland, on January 28, 1822. Both, of course, were of Scotch descent, but Sir John was of English descent, was born at St. Andrews, Argenteuil County, Quebec, on March 12, 1821; Sir John Thompson, of Irish descent, was born in Halifax, Nova Scotia, on November 10, 1844; Sir Mackenzie Bowell, English descent, was born at Riekinghall, Suffolk, England, on December 27, 1823; Sir Charles Tupper, of N. E. Loyallist stock, was born at Amherst, Nova Scotia, on July 2, 1821; Sir Wilfrid Laurier, of French descent, was born at St. Lin, L'Assomption County, Quebec, on Nov. 29, 1841; Sir Robt. Borden, of English descent, was born at Grand Pre, King's County, Nova Scotia, on Nov. 24, 1844; Arthur Meighen, Irish-Canadian stock, was born at Anderson, Blainville Township, Perth County, Ontario, on June 18, 1874; Mackenzie King, was born at Kitchener, Ont., on December 17, 1874.

Their terms of office were, Sir John Macdonald, from July 1, 1867, to November 6, 1873; Sir Alexander Mackenzie, from November 7, 1873, to October 16, 1878; Sir John Macdonald, from October 17, 1878, to June 8, 1891; Sir John Abbott, from June 15, 1891, to December 5, 1892; Sir John Thompson, from December 5, 1892, to December 12, 1894; Sir Mackenzie Bowell, from December 12, 1894, to April 27, 1896; Sir Charles Tupper, from April 27, 1896, to July 8, 1896; Sir Wilfrid Laurier, from July 11, 1896, to October 6, 1911; Sir Robert Borden, from October 10, 1911, to July 10, 1920; Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, from July 10, 1920, to December 29, 1921; Rt. Hon. Wm. Lyon Mackenzie King, from December 29, 1921, to the present time.

The world's bird population is estimated at seventy-five billion, or forty times the number of human beings on earth.

Cecil Sharp, Who Loved Music and Children

Not long ago a man who did much to make the lives of English-speaking children everywhere happier finished his work on earth. We take from an article that appeared some time ago in The Children's Newspaper a short account of the labors of Cecil Sharp.

He was a scholar educated at Uppingham and Cambridge. As a young man he lived in South Australia, where he held an official position. He came back to England and took up as his mission the reviving of a national interest in the old English music that had been nearest to the hearts of the people as a whole. He was not only greatly in earnest, but he was wise and shrewd in his methods of giving the old a new life. He travelled all over the country collecting the old folk songs that were native to each part, and published them so that anyone anywhere could make a choice from what had been local. Later he added to the music the dances that were their accompaniment wherever a village green had its maypole.

The people of England were unaware of what was going on. Now the enthusiastic rarely captures the people as a crowd. He does it slowly and gently. The old music and dancing came back through the small children—the infant school, where dancing is as natural as skipping about in the meadow. School inspectors smiled on the old music. Training colleges for teachers taught it. Teachers knew the advantage of joyful exercises. The children loved the graceful dances and the tuneless old songs, and so the music and natural joy of rural England came back to this generation.

It was Cecil Sharp who nursed the revival into a lasting activity. He has left us now at the age of sixty-five, and the world sings his praise; but the real monument is in the thousands of schools that have been brightened by his life-work, and in the memory of those songs that will persist in the fathers and mothers of new generations.

I Saw the Beauty of the World

I saw the beauty of the world before me like a flag unfurled. The splendor of the morning sky. And all the stars in company. I thought: How beautiful it is! My soul said: There is more than this.

I saw the pomp of death and birth. The generations of the earth. I found on saints and heroes crowned. And love as wide as heaven is round; I thought: How wonderful it is! My soul said: There is more than this.

Sometimes I have an awful thought That this side of things I ought; It comes like wind, it burns like flame. How shall I give that thought a name?

It draws me like a loving kiss. My soul says: There is more than this. I dreamed an angel of the Lord, With purple wings and golden sword, And such a splendor in his face As made a glory in the place. I thought: How beautiful he is! My soul said: There is more than this.

That angel's Lord I cannot see Or hear, but He is Lord to me: And in the heavens, and earth, and skies The good which lives till evil dies. The love I cannot understand: God writes His name with His own hand.

Why the Bells Ring

In many parts of rural England, during late August and early September, one may hear a church bell being rung morning and evening at times when no services are being held. This is the "glorious bell" which was once sounded in practically all villages and hamlets throughout the countryside at 3 a.m. and 3 p.m. as soon as the harvest was sufficiently advanced, to tell the villagers when they might begin glancing and when they must cease. The custom still lingers, even though the modern machine-rake leaves less wheat to be gleaned than did the old hand-rake. Indeed, the high price of bread, in comparison with what it was before the war, has led to a revival of glancing, and now, through the loss of his kingdom, they were forced to wear very plain attire. Somewhat rebuked, Irene turned on her heel.

"I never heard that story before."

"Princess Golden Locks"

By MRS. HARRISON EKE

SITUATED above the level of the surrounding country, two miles from St. Abbott's Primary School, stood a beautiful mansion. The mistress, a silver-haired, sweet-faced lady, darling of adoring parents, the young pupils. She loved children and never tired of their merry voices and happy laughter.

One day the children were all very excited. They were invited to a fancy dress party to be held at the mansion the following week. Prizes for the prettiest costumes were the outstanding feature of the evening. Two small pupils, May and Jean, discussed the event with much pleasure. They were great friends and were very much liked by the other children, who failed to see their faults and were not in the least jealous of their success or appearance, which, even among adult children, meant much when one was singled out from the rest and admired by the lady of the mansion.

May was a very pretty little girl of seven and a half years, with sunny blue eyes and rosy cheeks. She was dressed very plainly, for the simple reason that her parents were not in the position to dress her in fine clothes like the rest of the children, which fact added to their surprise when the lady of the mansion named her "Princess Golden Locks."

At their age they imagined a princess to be a very grand person indeed, and May above all others to receive such distinction, came as a very disagreeable surprise to Irene Meadows, who considered the honor should come to her because her parents were notable people. The idea, of course, was a mistake, but Irene, the spoiled darling of adoring parents, failed to see this, and, therefore, made herself very miserable.

May blushed a deep red, and curtsied very prettily in response. "It's not fair," declared Irene crossly, when they were grouped together at recess. "May does not look a bit like a princess. Her dresses are all blue and white, and she wears silk and satin and jewels."

This much Irene declared emphatically was true, "because she had seen a real princess in the picture books more, had read heaps and heaps of stories. Therefore she was quite sure princesses lived in palaces and wore all sorts of things, and had a splendid time and returned home tired out but very happy. May, perhaps, was the only one whose thoughts wandered from the scene to Irene's sick room."

May lived in a pretty little bungalow with a lovely flower garden. When morning came, she begged to be allowed to take a bouquet of flowers to Irene. Her mother gave her permission to do so and cut a large bunch of lovely blossoms. Irene's home was not far away, so May hurried along with the flowers and soon reached the house. She rang the bell and presently the door opened. Without delay she was ushered into Irene's presence.

"Oh, what lovely flowers!" cried Irene delighted. "Are they out of your own garden?" "Yes," replied May happily. "I thought you would like them."

Irene started perplexedly at her visitor, unable to realize it was the girl to whom she had been so unkind. "I wish I had not been so disagreeable," said Irene a little brokenly. "I did not mean to be really."

"Oh, I am sure you did not, Irene. I hope you will soon be able to return to school." And then she told Irene all about the wonderful party. "I am so glad you got first prize," burst forth Irene with real pleasure in her tones. "When I come back to school I hope we shall be real friends."

"I hope so too," was the hearty response.

Laughing Jackass

How a Bird's Chuckles Were Broadcast

By LESLIE G. MAINLAND, F.Z.S.

IT may be some time before we see any more Laughing Jackasses in this country, so those which are already in our zoos become especially interesting. The Government of Australia—where these amusing birds have their home—has decided that it will grant no more permits to dealers to take them out of the country.

When next you go to a zoo, look out for a bird clothed in blues and greys who wears a long beak and is labelled "Great Australian Kingfisher." He is the Laughing Jackass, but many soon think that this name is a little undignified, and so leave it off his cage. Visitors may then go by and never dream that they are passing the famous fun maker.

And he can be really funny. Try to persuade the keeper to make him laugh. The man will go into the bird's cage and pretend that he wants to catch him. At first the bird will simply fly from branch to branch and back again. Then he begins to be faintly amused at the keeper's efforts to catch him. When the man begins to get hot and flustered, the cream of the joke starts to dawn upon the Jackass. He throws back his long beak and you hear the first "Wah-ha-ha-ha!" This grows from a mere giggle into a chuckle, and from a chuckle into a gust of uncontrollable laughter. The Jackass digs his claws into his perch and holds tight while he laughs himself silly.

This roar of merriment seems to be real laughter to human listeners, though in reality it is only the natural cry of an excited bird. Perhaps when you were younger you have been silly enough to chase an old hen. Do you remember how the squawks faintly reminded you of chuckles and giggles? Funny? Yet that hen was actually most indignant at the way you were disturbing her, and she was trying to tell you so.

However, this big Kingfisher has the power of making human beings laugh till tears roll down their cheeks. As there cannot be too much fun in the world, I arranged to catch the bird's laughter with a portable microphone and broadcast it to all within listening range. It proved to be one of the most successful wireless experiments I was ever associated with.

We had to work to a time-table. The Laughing Jackass was due to perform within ten seconds of the flash of a spoken explanation as to what was being attempted. You cannot keep people hanging about with glowing valves and idle loudspeakers. They at once think something has gone wrong with their sets and begin to tune in again. Then there is trouble for themselves and their neighbors.

It is rather nervous work—feeling you are at the mercy of a bird who takes no interest in the fact that hundreds of thousands of people are waiting for him to begin. However, we had a successful rehearsal, and hoped for the best.

The Laughing Jackass did not betray us. Promptly to the second it made the microphone ring with its gusts of laughter, while the wireless engineers at the "controls" could not help catching the infection. The laughter of the crowd of human on-lookers could be heard as well as the chuckles of the bird over an area of at least 10,000 square miles.

I still treasure a letter of thanks mailed to me by a lonely, friendly woman in a big city, who said she sat in her room and laughed till tears came when she heard the voice of the queer bird. It was, she wrote, the one laugh she had had since she left her old home circle.

To Our Girls

With Apologies to Kipling

If you can dress to make yourself attractive,
Yet not make puffs and curls your chief delight;
If you can swim and row, be strong and active,
But of the gentler graces lose not sight;

If you can dance without a craze for dancing,
Play without giving play too strong a hold,
Enjoy the love of friends without romancing,
Care for the weak, the friendless, and the old;

If you can master French and Greek and Latin,
And not acquire as well a priggish mien,
If you can feel the touch of silk and satin,
Without despising calico and Jean;

If you can play a saw and use a hammer,
Can do a man's work when the need arises,
Can sing, when asked, without excuse or stammer,
Can rise above unfriendly snubs and slurs;

If you make good bread as well as fudge,
Can sew with skill, and have an eye for dust;
If you can be a friend and hold no grudges,
A girl whom all will love because they must;

If sometime you should meet and love another,
And make a home with faith and peace enshrined,
And you are soul, a loyal wife and mother,
You'll work out pretty nearly to my mind.

The plan, that's been developed through the ages,
And win the best that life can have in store,
You'll be, my girl, a model for the ages,
A woman whom the world will bow before.

THIS CANADA OF OURS

IN 1834, THREE HEROIC JESUIT MISSIONARIES SET OUT IN A CANOE UP THE OTTAWA RIVER TO MAKE THE POLARIS AND DANGEROUS JOURNEY TO THE LAND OF THE HURONS. THEY WERE FATHERS BENOIST, DUBOIS, AND DUBOIS. LATER ON OTHERS JOINED THEM, LEAVING BEHIND THE WORLD AND ALL ITS PRIESTS.

THEY BUILD HURON HOUSES AND CHURCHES. THEY TRAVEL, TAUGHT, AND LABORED AMONG THE HURONS FROM DAYBREAK TILL DARK. THE SMALLPOX DANGEROUSLY THE INDIANS FOR TWO YEARS AND THESE DEVOTED MEN BENT THEMSELVES TIRELESSLY TO AND AND SUCCESS.

IN 1840, THE FRODO'S SWIFT DOWN THE HURON RIVER LIKE A TORNAADO. KILLED, BURNED AND TORTURED NOT ONLY THE INDIANS, BUT ALSO THE BRAVE FRENCH PRIESTS. ST. ANNE'S MEMORIAL CHURCH AT PONTIAC, QUEBEC, MARKS THE SITE OF THE HURON SETTLEMENT WHERE FATHERS BENOIST AND LALEMAN PERISHED.

A Message From the North

What message is it that the northern air has over the countries, from one hilltop to another, down into the gentler tracts of the South? It is that those who would build well must build wisely and slowly, that no great work is achieved without hardiness, that time is not measured by a day or by a lifetime, that England is eternally richer for those who give of their best, do of their best, and pass on.

Was not that what Milton felt when he left us his glorious trumpet cry: I argue not Against Heaven's hand or will, nor bate a jot Of heart or hope; but still bear up and stir Right onward.

The Size of an Atom

I must just tell how many atoms there are in a drop of water. There are about 280 blades of grass to a square inch, and you reckon up the number of blades of grass on the earth you will be surprised to know that it is about the same as the number of atoms in a thimbleful of water. They have all a law and order and structure of their own—Sir Oliver Lodge.

Canada's Reds Come Out in the Open But Are Not Feared

By J. A. C.

THE Communist or Red Headquarters of Canada are next door to the Albany Club on King Street East, Toronto, just where the shadows of big business fall about 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Three steps up on a nice shiny brass elevator, in modern offices, sit the four men who direct what you might call the present destinies of Lenin's Bolshevik world campaign in Canada.

Only a thin wall separates them from the Albany Club, the stronghold of the established order of things. At noon, before lunch, the Albany Club stands up and sings "God Save the King." The lusty voices of elderly gentlemen float out of windows and through walls.

It is the customary ceremony in the Bolshevik headquarters of Canada for the comrades who happen to be present at this moment all to sit down except one, who, nearest the window, rises to his feet and emphatically shuts the window.

Did you imagine, as I did, that Communists had headquarters, if any, down in some dark and moldy cellar?

Did you picture the Communists as underfed, underdressed cartoons of humanity who came out in the dark and emitted half-intelligible sounds from soap boxes to small handfuls of drifters in out-of-the-way corners of the downtown district?

Up-to-Date Head Offices

The fact is, the offices of the Communists on King Street, not a whole block from King and Yonge, is a busy, up-to-date office, typewriters clicking, girls filing and taking dictation, telephone ringing.

The Communists in these offices have no whiskers. None of the four national leaders has even a mustache.

And in the last street meeting they held, on James Street, last Sunday night, between the city hall and Eaton's, over 500 men jammed together in the mysterious gloom of the downtown night to listen to Reds preaching the Red doctrine.

We like to be up-to-date. In view of mysterious goings on in England, it seems worth while to find out just who, what and where the Communists are in Canada.

Morris Spector is chairman, and titular head of the Communist Party of Canada. The Communist Party is openly and avowedly allied with the Communist of Russia. Their platform is the platform of Lenin, Bolshevism, the dictatorship of the proletariat.

Jack Macdonald, for long years well known in Labor circles in Toronto, is secretary of the party. Tim Buck, editor of the party's propaganda, and William Moriarty, the other two big figures in the national headquarters. And every one of them has been to Russia.

Leaders Consult Moscow

Moriarty is just home from attending the annual Red Congress in Moscow. Tim Buck was there last year. Jack Macdonald and Spector were there the year before.

They are in regular official and unofficial correspondence with Moscow. They report and get reports. These four men, all well known in Toronto Labor circles, sit down with all frankness to give any information we wanted.

"How many Communists are there in Canada right now?" we asked.

"The Communist party has about 4,300 members, active, paid up," replied Tim Buck. "And how many sympathizers has the party in the whole Dominion?"

"It would be hard to say. We have 4,300 members in good standing.

Stewart Smith, in his turn, head of the Young Communist League, is being sent to the Red University in Moscow this winter.

That's a fact we know. We might have 30,000 sympathizers. There are indications that we have a great many more.

"What indications?"

"At the Trades Congress of Canada held in London, Ontario, last year, which was the annual official gathering of the delegates of all the labor unions of the Dominion, I," said Tim Buck, "ran for the office of president. I have been a Communist for years. I stood up and made my address to these representatives of Labor as a Red. I received forty-four votes out of 300 from these accredited delegates of organized labor in Canada."

"Greatest strength in Nova Scotia?"

"Where is your party's greatest strength?" we asked.

"Amongst the miners of Nova Scotia and the miners of Alberta."

"Are the miners Canadians or foreigners?"

"In Nova Scotia they are wholly Canadian-born. In Alberta they are very largely foreign born."

They publish a weekly paper, "The Worker," which has 14,000 circulation. They have members in every union in the Dominion.

"And what is the nationality of the majority of your membership?"

"British, by a very large majority," says Morris Spector, president of the Reds.

"Red Programme for Canada."

In a nutshell what is the Red programme for Canada? They say dictatorship of the proletariat. That phrase has a dull, thundering sound. It has no flash of meaning. What it means is the absolute control of industry by the worker in that industry. No more profits, interest, rents. No more investment. Nothing but work, and all rewards in proportion to work.

"How about revolution?" we asked, somewhat deliberately looking at him.

"What Britain gets, we get in Canada," says Spector. "If Britain has a revolution, we shall be the first to follow it."

"What would happen in Canada if the Reds won their way with their revolution?"

"The country would be governed exactly as Russia is governed by the Bolsheviks. Each industry would be run by committees of its workers. Only to work actively for the party we will not accept him. By working for the party we mean he must be a Communist at his work bench, in his shop, in his union, submit to the discipline of the party, act and speak at all times in favor of the Communist cause. We have no parlor Reds in our party."

So there are the facts. A small party, widely scattered, strongest where there is discontent, including miners, farmers and factory workers.

workers would be permitted to sit on councils to govern cities, provinces or the Dominion as a whole. Parliamentary Government would be cast overboard, lock, stock and barrel.

"But would not absolute dictatorship by the workers be as unfair as absolute dictatorship by any other class?" we asked.

"Think it over," replied Morris Spector.

Right now, the Communist Party is asserting certain policies with considerable success right in the strongholds of organized labor. They want the railways all nationalized and merged. They insist that armed forces be not used against unarmed people.

And here is the most spectacular item: the Reds, whose fundamental belief is revolution, are against war. At the Trades Congress held two years ago at Vancouver, the Communists in the ranks of labor brought forward a resolution that in the event of war being declared the Congress would immediately call a general strike in every industry throughout the Dominion.

Labour's War Declaration

Canadian organized labor did not adopt this resolution. But they did adopt an amendment:

That in the event of war being declared a special section of the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress would be called automatically, for the purpose of considering a general strike.

Forty-two hundred avowed Communists, mostly miners in remote sections of Canada, are after all only a trifle in the weight of political parties in this country. But they are agitators. To be a member of the party, you have to undertake to be an agitator. Not every Liberal or Conservative is a worker for his party. The 4,300 Communists have to be.

In addition to keeping close personal touch with Russia the Canadian Communists are sending this winter, Stewart Smith, a young man in his teens, who is editor of their Young Communist League propaganda, to Moscow to attend the university there for a year and a half. He will receive an all round education in Communism.

"Did you receive any funds from Russia?"

"The Red quarterly grinded."

"We only wish we did. We hope we do some day. One of the disadvantages of being a worker is that one has little money."

Dangerous or not, Canada's Reds are out in the open. Their meetings are street meetings. They apparently have nothing to hide. The Reds meet in damp cellars and manufacture bombs while spouting grim and desperate words. They aren't making any bombs. They expect to take over the stores of bombs already in existence when their time comes.

A "Fascist" movement has begun to develop against them in Toronto. Semi-organized bands of hecklers and disturbers are in evidence at their street meetings. They meet with vigorous opposition from the "right" wing of organized labor, the strongest wing. At the last congress, 1923, Tim Buck again ran for president of the congress and received only twenty-nine votes, as against forty-four the year before.

A year ago, you had to walk up two flights of rickety stairs to get at the Communists, when they had their quarters on Queen Street.

Now you go up in an elevator. What the significance of this is might be debated. Copyright by The Star Newspaper Service. Unauthorized reproduction forbidden.

The Garden Week by Week

By NORMAN W. F. RANT, F.R.H.S.

SO many inquiries about the culture of that delightful plant family, the Anemones, have been addressed to the writer of late that he thinks a special article on the subject may be of interest to gardeners in general. If anything that may be written about these beautiful and dainty flowers will help to encourage the growing of them the time and space taken will be well spent.

Presumably the people who inquire about Anemones refer more particularly to the St. Brigid Anemone, which is more widely grown than the others. The St. Brigid Anemone is not a distinct species but a variety of Anemone coronaria. It is a selection of the Coronaria (or Poppy Anemone) chosen and improved upon, the history of which is as follows: Over fifty years ago the late Mrs. Lawrence, after years of patient selection and re-selection, under annual sowing of the old garden Anemone (Anemone coronaria) achieved, in the survival of the fittest, the fine strain known by her name de plume, St. Brigid. That was in an old Kildare garden, near the site of St. Brigid's oratory. The triumph of her labors of love, apart from procuring considerable correspondence, further threatened a penalty of publicity and of notoriety she was anxious to avoid and led to her sheltering herself under the name de plume, "St. Brigid." Hence, the St. Brigid Anemone.

The pure white form of St. Brigid's Anemone, called Crispetree's White, was originated in Ireland and named after Mr. R. Crowley, of Cloughan, County Tipperary, who received two awards of merit from the Royal Horticultural Society of Ireland, and at Westminster. This Anemone is wholly distinct, inasmuch as the anthers as well as the petals are silvery shining white. It was possibly an inspiration derived from that master-hand which had him some few years ago to discern this novelty among a bed of seedlings, and then, by following St. Brigid's care, evolve it into distinct entity.

Grown From Seed

St. Brigid may be grown from seeds, and the best time to sow the seeds is as soon as they are ripe, say sometime in July. The seeds are enveloped in a woolly covering that makes them adhere in masses, so that regular and thin sowing is a matter of some difficulty. This can be surmounted by putting the seeds in a bowl, mixing them with sharp sand and rubbing the two with the fingers till they get mingled in equal proportions. This sowing will prevent the necessity for disturbing the seedlings after they have flowered. The seedlings will germinate in a month or less, and keep growing until November.

The soil for rearing these Anemones should be friable, and contain some gritty matter in it. The soil must be well drained, it not naturally so. Last-mold should be used in preference to animal manures, and this should be well incorporated with the soil, and not put in layers. Old decayed turf is also excellent material to mix in with the soil.

By skilful cultivation with a suitable soil, tubers can be planted in almost every month of the year to get a succession, but experience has proved that October and the latter part of January are the two best times for planting. In favorable winters the best flowers are obtained from Fall planting. Some protection is needed for this planting if the flowers appear before sharp frosts have ceased. Sometimes sand is put in low and above the tubers, but this is not essential. Plant the tubers two inches deep and a width apart to suit one's taste, six to seven inches is advised. Rake the surface level and smooth before planting, make a hole sufficiently wide for the tuber to be laid flat and do not use too much pressure on the soil when covering them. Otherwise some of the crowns or growing points are liable to be crushed, as they are rather brittle. Be careful to keep the right side upwards, and this can usually be recognized by the knobs on the top. A few fibrous, the remains of the roots, may usually be detected on the undersides.

May Be Divided

As in the case of the Tuberous Begonia, the tubers may be divided and every piece will grow, provided it has a knob or growing point with one or more buds upon it. As a rule, large tubers should only be cut in half for bedding purposes, and smaller pieces cut off for the increase of some special variety. Small pieces should be grown for a year or two to get them to useful flowering size. As after treatment, it is a good plan to cover the beds with two inches of half-decayed leaves for protection; but it may be necessary to liberate some of the foliage and flowers if they have difficulty in piercing the undecayed flakes of leaves in spring. Fall-planted tubers usually bloom in May, but as has happened sometimes during a mild, early part of winter the foliage comes up too early. When a late cold spell comes along it cuts this down, usually resulting in killing the tuber. A top mulching, as suggested, will help to retard the growth, thereby saving the tuber. Spring-planted tubers usually bloom in June or July.

Storing Tubers

It is a good practice to lift, dry and store the tubers immediately after the foliage has completely died away and before the second growth has commenced. Where the soil is of a light character it may be possible to cultivate St. Brigid Anemones by leaving them in the soil for some years till the ground requires re-planting or the tubers require to be replaced.

As our readers will understand from the foregoing, to have success with St. Brigid it is necessary to take a certain amount of care and trouble, but, in the writer's opinion, there are a number of Anemones just as dainty and beautiful, which, when once planted in suitable soil and positions necessary to their welfare, will take care of themselves and produce a great amount of pleasure to the gardener who undertakes to grow them.

There was no showing of flowers which created more interest in my own garden than a bed of Anemone pulsatilla, which blossomed out on March 12 last. If our readers know the blue native Anemone of our country they have an idea of the color and shape of Anemone pulsatilla, but the size of the flowers is much more a glorified Anemone patens. The flower appears long before any leaves are formed, and all that this Anemone asks is a friable soil with a fair amount of lime rubble and grit added. It will grow and bloom in either sun or shade. Being a fibrous rooted plant, there is nothing in the way of a corn, tuber or tuberous root to rot or decay. A good idea is to plant some kind of bulbs which will flower later among these Anemones, so that there will be bloom to take the place of the Anemone flower when blossoming.

An Alpine Anemone

In Anemone blanda we have an earlier species than Anemone pulsatilla (poppy flower) by a fortnight. It is distinctly an Alpine Anemone, and requires good land in a sunny spot, grows about six inches high and has deep sapphire-blue flowers. Is quite hardy and of the easiest culture, but spreads slowly. Anemone hepatica, of which there are many varieties, is the earliest of all the Anemones, blossoming here in the middle of February. It is a fibrous-rooted plant, and although of easy culture it dislikes disturbance. The flowers, which are an exquisite pale blue, come long before the leaves. It requires a half shady position in good loam and leaf mould.

Anemone apennina is very fine, as is also Anemone nemorosa and its varieties. The former have white and the latter pale blue flowers. Both require good soil and leaf mould and should be planted in a half shady spot. Anemone nemorosa is the English Wood Anemone.

Missionaries in China Must Teach Christ at Own Consequences

Methodist missionaries to China go to preach the teachings of Christ and must take any physical or legal consequences. The Board of Foreign Missions has ruled that missionaries in foreign lands, especially in China, should not request protection of courts and powers other than those of China nor ask extra-territorial exemption because they are American citizens.

Science League Aims to Keep Evolution on Secular Lines

The Science League of America expects to invade every state with lectures and debates on the theory of evolution in an effort to keep instruction on the subject in the public schools on a strictly secular basis. Mr. Maynard Shipley, a lecturer of the league, proposes to bring several noted foreign evolutionists to America to supplement the American speakers. He has named H. G. Wells as one of them.

Little Items Lead to Big Loss in Cream Separation

Separating butterfat from the rest of the milk in the cream separator is a delicate process and lack of attention to details, which may seem unimportant, often causes considerable fat to be left in the skim milk. It is pointed out by A. J. Young, of the farm mechanics department, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois. The manufacturer has done a commendable job in making a machine that will skim as accurately as does modern machinery. It should be properly handled and it should be given the sort of care that a high class product deserves, he said.

In the operation of such a machine the little things count for more than when a machine of less refinement is being used. Consequently the experienced user will insist that the separator be kept level and fastened securely to a solid foundation, that all the bearings are lubricated with good separator oil, that all the old dirt and oil be cleaned out occasionally with gasoline or kerosene, that the machine be operated at the proper speed, with the milk at the proper temperature, that the machine be washed thoroughly each time it is used, and that it be protected from the dust and kept dry when it is not in use.

"Too often the user fails to watch these points because even when the separator is sorely neglected it will continue to deliver a fairly good amount of cream at one spout and skim milk at the other. Users sometimes fail to realize that a separator which is seen a little out of level, or which has a bowl which vibrates or is partly clogged with dirt, is very likely to send considerable butterfat into the wrong spout. To do good work a separator must be well built, run at the correct speed and kept in good running order."

Particular attention should be paid to the directions furnished with the machine. It should be remembered that delicate bearings operating at high speed will last a long time if they are properly cared for, but that they are quickly ruined by dirt or lack of good oil when neglected.

Hens Need Comfort

One of the important essentials for high egg production from the poultry flock this winter will be that the hens be kept comfortable. To maintain a high morale in the flock is, therefore, the function of the poultry house. From the hen's standpoint, the house that affords protection against extreme temperatures and the winds and that is light, clean, and reasonably dry is the most satisfactory.

Hens can regulate body temperatures more easily when the humidity is well high. Proper ventilation, location and construction will aid in maintaining these conditions. Good natural drainage under the house is a factor that is raised about eight inches above the outside level are the two important features of the construction.

The Worth of Education

In view of the importance we ascribe to education, it is interesting to note that, according to a recent report made by a commission of educational experts, the money value of a university education is placed at $70,000, while that of a high school education is estimated to be about $25,000. This is based on a long study of the earning capacity of both these classes.

The average maximum income of the untrained man is given as $11,000, that of the high school graduate as $22,000 and that of the university graduate as $40,000. The total earnings of each of the three types up to the age of sixty are placed at $48,000, $78,000 and $150,000 respectively. It is further asserted that the university-trained man does not reach his maximum earning capacity till the age of sixty, while the untrained man passes his best at fifty.

This is somewhat reassuring in view of the present cost of education as compared with former times. In one of our large cities, according to official figures, it cost $84 per pupil even for a public school education in 1923. This was an increase from $54.67 per pupil five years earlier.

It is contended, however, that the highly educated person represents a dying race. It has even been estimated that at the end of six generations, the highly educated will be represented by less than a hundred descendants, the duty of raising a family having been swamped by the many luxuries created by science and by the corresponding demand upon man's time and energy.

Culling the dairy herd is just as important as culling the poultry flock. Culling eliminates the poor producing cows. The best method to this is to join a cow-testing association. If there is none near, private production record should be kept.

The way farm manure is handled determines its value. Get it on the land before the best part of its fertility leaches out.

Engineer Expert Tells How To Correct Motor Misfire

Valuable Hints Assist Operator to Locate Trouble in Cylinder—Examination of Ammeter Suggested for a Ground Causing Short Circuit

By HAROLD F. BLANCHARD
Whether you are an amateur or expert, you will find the following method of quickly locating a misfiring cylinder of value, and in fact, it is advisable to clip this article and keep it in the car for ready reference.

1. When the misfire occurs glance immediately at the ammeter. If the ammeter hand indicates less charge or more discharge (whichever it is depends on the engine speed), there is a ground causing a short circuit somewhere between the breaker points and the ammeter. (If the misfire does not affect the ammeter, pass on to paragraph 2.) Examine the insulation on the wire running from breaker mechanism to coil, tapping any worn spots which may come into contact with metal parts of the car. Also see that the end of the wire at the breaker mechanism is not touching any uninsulated metal part. Also examine the breaker points for metal particles or jagged edges. Missing due to a ground in the wire running from coil to switch and switch to ammeter is unlikely with a fully charged battery.

2. If the ammeter shows more charge or less discharge when the misfire occurs, look for dirt between the breaker points, sticking of breaker arm, or more likely, a dirty or loose connection, or broken wire, running from breaker mechanism to coil, coil to switch, switch to ammeter, ammeter to starting switch (on most cars), starting switch to battery, battery to ground. Even the slightest amount of looseness or dirt at any of these points may account for the trouble. Also note that a ground in the wires running from ammeter to starting switch to battery may produce the same action on the ammeter.

Normal Ammeter Action
In most cases, of course, misfiring will be accompanied by normal ammeter action. If the misfire is regular, being confined apparently to one cylinder, the defective cylinder may be determined by short-circuiting the various spark plugs with a wooden-handled screwdriver. No change in engine speed or exhaust rhythm indicates that this cylinder is at fault. A simpler method, if the engine is warm, is to feel the spark plug shells with the fingers, since the shell on the misfiring cylinder will be noticeably cooler than the others. Remove the spark plug in this cylinder. If the plug porcelain is even finely cracked replace it. If the porcelain is covered with carbon scrape it clean. If the plug porcelain is wet dry it over gentle flame. Adjust the points to 1-32 inch. Wipe any moisture or dirt from the outside of the plug.

3. See that the high-tension wire running to this plug has no bare spots; if so, replace it; and pull it slightly at the distributor end to make sure that it is properly attached. If the surface of the wire is wet with moisture, dry it in a mild oven, but replace it if the insulation is rotten. If this cylinder continues to misfire, test the compression, grinding or adjusting the valves as required. See that valves are not sticking. If compression is good and misfiring continues remove spark and put in new one. If plug is wet look for gasket leakage or cracked cylinder. If misfiring continues, look for crack in distributor cap and replace cap if crack is found.

Two Cylinders Miss Fire
The method is similar if two cylinders miss regularly, but note that this may be due to connection of two high-tension wires to wrong spark plugs.

4. If misfiring is not confined to one cylinder but skips around, see that breaker points and spark plug points are not too close together, if misfiring occurs at high speed, and that breaker points and spark plug points are not too far apart if misfiring occurs at low speed. The breaker points' setting varies with different cars; from ten to twenty-five thousandths of an inch, one sixteenth of an inch being between average, and the adjustment should be varied one way or the other until even running at all speeds is obtained. The breaker points should be smooth, and most securely and should be dressed on an oil stone to grind off any nicks, although a pit less than twenty-five per cent of total area may be ignored. The points must be thoroughly cleaned of oil before replacement.

See that the distributor cap is clean and dry inside and outside, and that the distributor arm is making good contact; if badly worn these parts may require replacement. Incidentally, when buying ignition parts be sure to get genuine parts; accept no substitute, for the troubles you can have with "gyp" parts are endless. Nor will a leak result if the shaft of the distributor is replaced if any are found. Examine the high-tension wire running from coil to distributor, dry it if wet and if insulation is worn or rotten, replace.

Grinding Valves

6. If the trouble continues, it may be that all valves need grinding, and testing the compression by cranking the engine will determine this. Otherwise the trouble is probably caused by a mixture which is too rich or too weak. First be sure that your fuel is of known quality. A weak mixture indicated by slow response when the throttle is opened quickly and is often, although not always, accompanied by backfiring. A rich mixture gives instant response to the throttle but the usual power is lacking. Misfiring with a weak mixture may be due to dirt or water or to sticking carburetor parts, or to air leakage into the intake manifold. Misfiring with a rich mixture may be due to a leaky float needle valve, a sticking float, a leaky or gasoline-logged float, a choke valve which sticks closed. If none of these mixture troubles is apparent, adjust the carburetor.

It should be understood, of course, that there are many other rare causes of misfiring which cannot be described because of lack of space.

Leaks in Radiator Caused by Emblems

Some car owners are more justified than others in attaching emblems to their radiators. The type of radiator is the determining factor. Generally speaking, a honeycomb radiator will stand for fewer decorations than the tubular type. In the latter the bend of the fins does not do much harm. Nor will a leak result if the shaft of the emblem device cuts the fins a little.

Overseas Auto Sales Improved

Third Quarter of This Year Exceeds All Previous, General Motors Record

The overseas sales by the export group of General Motors in the third quarter of this year exceeded the sales in any quarter in the history of the company, as did the total sales for the nine months of this year. These figures which follow include the sales by General Motors Export Company's overseas distributors and dealers and the sales by the overseas assembly plants of General Motors.

Third quarter	25,723	14,209
Nine months	67,583	48,165

Assembly plants and subsidiary corporations for more economic distribution and for the purpose of better meeting local conditions have been established at strategic points throughout the world.

Sales during the three years ended December 31 follow:

Yr. End.	Number	Value
Dec. 31 1924	45,000	$10,747,418
1923	45,000	$9,193,869
1922	21,872	19,876,015

*These figures include the sales of Chevrolet, Oldsmobile, Oakland, Buick and Cadillac in all countries of the world except the Dominion of Canada and the United States.

Wear of Universal Joints Prevented

Much wear to the universal joints may be avoided by traveling over a rough road in second gear. While in second it is possible to keep the engine pulling constantly without having the car gain a speed that will be too fast for the road. If power is applied alternately with the application of the brakes, to keep the car from going too fast, the universals receive double shocks.

Vibration Trouble

One cause of vibration in a car is the misalignment of shafts united by disc universal joints. In cars having this kind of joint one or both of the shafts of the propeller shaft a very noticeable vibration may arise if the shaft does not run true. This can frequently be eliminated by tightening the bolts that hold the discs to the spider. If the trouble is not overcome by this operation install new discs.

Carbon and Poor Oil

Carbon is naturally produced in the engine of your automobile. All petroleum oils, including their derivative, gasoline, are hydrocarbon compounds, which are chemically combined of carbon and hydrogen. No petroleum lubricating oil or gasoline is carbonless, though you will find that the better refined oils and gasoline contain less freely than the poorer grades.

Friction Tape Ineffective

It is not advisable to use friction tape on high-tension wiring or on any other wiring which may come in contact with grease or oil. Friction tape will not insulate ignition current, nor will it stay in place when soaked with oil. It is much better to use linen tape and shellac on high-tension wires.

Bent Steering Parts

Warnings have been sounded by engineers against the practice of trying to straighten steering rods and cross tubes bent in automobile accidents. Mechanics use two general methods of straightening—cold bending and heat treating. Both of these methods are unsafe. It is advisable to replace bent parts.

Power Over Traffic

The English conference of motor vehicle administrators is appealing for assistance to the incoming congress for authority granted each State to regulate all motor traffic within it. The purpose is to curb recklessness of interstate trucks and busses and require them to follow routes prescribed by a State.

When the brake pins and connections are being oiled, be careful to keep the lubricant away from the brake drums and lining, as grease at that point may cause the brakes to slip or grab.

A HEAVY DISCHARGE INDICATES A GROUND.

Record Output for Studebaker Is Seen

Local Distributors Foresee Even Larger Turnover During 1926 Than in Present Year

A large number of encouraging factors in the automobile manufacturing line indicate a still bigger season for 1926 than the record-breaking season now coming to a close, according to Mr. R. J. Jameson, local Studebaker dealer.

For one thing, manufacturers are reporting still larger releases of parts, even in the face of the obvious seasonal decline in the sales of new cars. This apparently anomalous situation is explained in part by the fact that many large producers are still striving to catch up with back orders; by the increased demand from agricultural sections, particularly in the Pacific Northwest, and by the large volume of cars being built for export.

Mr. Jameson feels, however, that even these factors do not warrant the continuance of the high rate of output maintained during the last month, and there is no question but that in some instances cars are being stockpiled. Some observers have been fearful that the expensive seasons of 1920 and 1924 were being disregarded, but here and there are indications that the brakes are being applied.

Both Studebaker plants are running at full capacity on the schedule of 14,000 cars set for this month, but it is likely that output will taper off again toward the end of the month. Material specifications are being made up for an output of 43,000 cars in the first quarter of 1926. Work is being started on a new spring plant to cost $300,000. Financial interests are speculating on the possibility of an increase in dividend rate at the next board meeting.

Lack of Lubrication Of Chassis Cause of Troubles in Lower Car

According to C. A. Roesch, president of the Alemite Company of California, an owner may take particular pride in the care he takes of his car, and meanwhile be neglecting some very important units of the car. "An owner of a new car may 'baby' the engine for a while, never forget to change the oil after every 500 miles, and cater to the car's whims as a fond mother might coddle her child," said Roesch. "But if he neglects to lubricate the chassis bearings at least every 500 miles his car, in spite of all else he may do for it, will develop squeaks and rattles, which are apt to require costly replacements, or greatly shorten the life of the car. A recent investigation among automobile establishments reveals the fact that most all repairs below the body line of a car are made necessary by lack of chassis lubrication."

Spring Shackles

When adjusting the spring shackles to eliminate side play be careful not to get them too tight. Tight shackles make the car ride roughly, straining the top spring leaf, and they may cause a broken spring or broken shackle bolt.

Two Major Advantages Studebaker Alone Offers

1-One-Profits Value 2-Unit-Built Construction

THERE are (as you probably know) only two manufacturers who actually build their cars complete—make all their own bodies, engines, clutches, steering gears, differentials, springs, gear sets, axles, gray iron castings and drop forgings.

One of these is Ford—in the low priced field. The other is Studebaker in the fine car field.

Because we eliminate the extra profits and overhead that many other manufacturers have to pay to outside parts and body makers—we are able to use finer materials and workmanship—yet charge no more than competing cars.

One-Profits Plus Unit-Built

Under this One-Profits policy the entire car is designed, engineered and manufactured as a complete, harmonious unit in Studebaker plants. Being Unit-Built, it functions as a unit. This adds years to its life—gives you scores of thousands of miles of excess transportation—greater riding comfort—minimum repair costs—and, finally, higher resale value.

Examine the Standard Six Coach closely—make comparisons with other cars—and you will understand the full meaning of One-Profits value. It is called a coach only because it is the lowest priced closed car ever sold by Studebaker. But it is a quality car through and through.

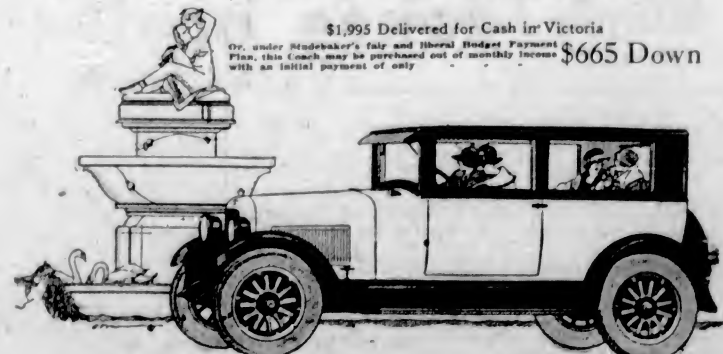

Notice the durable wool upholstery. See the heavy ornamental hardware; the plate glass windows and windshield; the fine trim to hide all tacks; the clock and gasoline gauge on dash, automatic windshield cleaner; stop light, locks on ignition, steering gear, door and spare-tire carrier—all operated by a single key.

The crankshaft is completely machined on all surfaces to eliminate vibration. And the motor is the most powerful in any car of this size and weight, according to the rating of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. It is a motor built for smooth, trouble-free service at 5 to 55 miles an hour—not for excessive speed or spectacular stunts.

No Yearly Models

The Studebaker policy of "no yearly models" is a further protection to owners. Under this policy Studebaker cars are always up to date—we add improvements from time to time and do not save them up for spectacular annual announcements which make cars artificially obsolete.

Come in—and let us demonstrate the Standard Six Coach without obligation on your part.

Endurance Test Proves Successful

Hupmobile Eight Is Driven From Rochester, N.Y., to Miami in 37½ Hours

James J. Williams, of Rochester, N.Y., set what is believed to be a new motor car speed and endurance record when he piloted a Hupmobile Eight standard stock touring car from that city to Miami, Fla., 1,646 miles in 37½ hours elapsed driving time. This is an average of 44.96 miles an hour. The record eclipses that of the fastest limited train from any point along the North Atlantic coast to Miami by several hours. Eight States and the District of Columbia were traversed. The run necessitated passing through the traffic of such cities as Williamsport and Harrisburg, Pa., Baltimore, Washington, Richmond, Va., Charlotte, N.C., Columbia, S.C., Augusta, Ga., and Jacksonville, Fla.

Approximately fifty miles of detours, 183 miles of deep sand in Georgia, and narrow, rutted and heavily traveled road between the Florida state line to Miami, were encountered. In addition to the usual city and highway traffic, from Baltimore to Richmond the car was piloted through a driving rain-storm.

Record Breaking Test
The run was the second record-breaking cross-country test of a Hupmobile Eight within recent weeks. On September 29 and 31, T. W. Campbell, Hupmobile distributor at Hartford, Conn., and C. E. Emery, of his organization, drove a standard stock Sedan bearing factory serial number E-961, from Hartford to Windsor, Ont., 866 miles, in nineteen hours and twenty minutes elapsed time, averaging 46.73 miles an hour.

The log of Mr. Williams' trip illustrates the remarkable speed schedule that was made. An average of forty-three miles an hour was made during the first eight hours; a 42.5 average was made the following five and a half; 45.1 during the next seven hours; 49.1 for the next seven; 45.7 for the next seven, and 42.7 during the last three. The highest speed average was between Columbia, S.C., and Jacksonville.

Despite the terrific speed at which the car was continuously driven, an average of 13.37 miles was made per gallon of gasoline. Mr. Williams reported. Crankcase oil was drained at the end of 1,000 miles and a fresh supply given the engine. Aside from that, no oil was added. Less than a pint of water overflowed the radiator at Miami, though none was added during the entire trip.

Mr. Williams, president of Jaa. J. Williams, Inc., of Rochester, Hupmobile distributor, was checked in at Miami by the William A. Estey Co., Hupmobile distributing organization in that city. Various distributors and dealers checked his arrival and departure en route.

Raced the Police
"There's a motorcycle officer in North Carolina who is waiting for me to return," he said, in commenting on the trip. "He and a brother officer in a big motor car were at a railroad crossing when I went by. At that time I didn't realize that the law requires all motor cars to stop at railroad crossings in that State. They immediately started after me. I distanced the motorcycle officer immediately. Then I slowed down and allowed the one in the car to draw alongside me. I yelled at him that I'd pay whatever the fine might be and give him $100 if he could catch me. He lost on the $100, and hasn't as yet received the other."

The car performed perfectly. I drained the oil in South Carolina and added gasoline as needed. That was all the attention the car had. Didn't even have a puncture. In fact, after starting, and except when a full stop in city traffic or at gasoline stations was compulsory, I never shifted out of high gear for mountains, traffic, detours or anything else. On arriving in Miami I personally delivered the car to its owner, who had previously dared me to try to make the trip within forty hours. The car had been my personal car and had been driven about 3,000 miles when I left Rochester.

Mr. Williams, who made the trip alone, is a veteran driver, with eighteen years' automobile experience. He drove the first twenty miles of the trip, including Rochester city traffic, in twenty-three minutes. Among his previous exploits are three trips from Detroit to Rochester, via Toledo and Cleveland, with Hupmobile Fours, in less than seventeen hours, including stops for gasoline and food. The distance is 475 miles.

Delivered Personally
He determined to make the test of the Hupmobile Eight's ability when its owner wanted the car delivered to him in Miami after leaving a purchase order in Rochester.

"I drove it continuously at speeds of from fifty to sixty miles an hour," he continued. "Whenever opportunity presented itself faster time was made. This happened on numerous occasions during daylight hours when the road was clear. At those times the speedometer went past the seventy-five-mile mark often."

"The hood was raised only once—when the oil was changed. No other part of the car was even touched. It was given only a superficial inspection before leaving Rochester. During the time it was used as my personal car nothing was done to it except a general tightening and cleaning."

Test for Valve Springs

Defective exhaust valve springs can be located by testing their tension. This is accomplished by inserting a screwdriver between the coils of the spring and turning it while the engine is running, thereby increasing the tension of the spring.

When using the automobile engine for braking it should be remembered that the faster the engine is driven in relation to the speed of the car, the greater will be the resistance offered.

The principal reason why there are so many fools in office is that there are so many out of office.

Surpassing Expectation

THE buyer of a Packard Eight logically expects much from one of the world's finest cars.

But the new series Packard Eight is providing more than new owners have learned to expect in any car.

Beauty, of course. But in the Packard Eight beauty is combined with a new luxury of roominess. The closed models have the widest and most spacious bodies offered on any motor car.

Effortless power—smooth, silent performance—a recognized distinction in either business or social use—all contribute to the pride of ownership in a Packard Eight.

These things are expected. But to these are added an unusual economy of operation and a new measure of uninterrupted service—the results of improvements which Packard pioneered.

Without these improvements no car is truly modern. By protecting moving parts they double the life of Packard cars.

Do this: Compare the new Cleveland Six point for point with cars $100, $200 and $300 higher in price—compare design, size, comfort and power—and you will see (you can't help seeing) a contrast all in favor of Cleveland Six.

A $200 reduction in the price of both the new Model 31 Four-Door Sedan, and the new Model 43 Four-Door Sedan, has given America's closed car buyers a brand new interpretation of value. People who may have been "on the fence" about buying a new car are now buying Cleveland Sixes. Daily sales eclipse everything in Cleveland Six history.

Think of a fine, six-cylinder 4-door Sedan at a list price of $1,765 with Cleveland Six beauty, and Cleveland Six power, and the great conveniences and advantages of the famous "One-Shot" Lubrication System!

You can lubricate the entire chassis of your Cleveland Six by simply pressing your heel on a plunger. All the spring bolts—the steering gear—all brakes—clutch shafts—the fan assembly—all told, 23 moving chassis parts are instantly flushed with fresh, clean lubricant.

In great demand among business and professional men and small families are the new Model 31 Coupe, now $1,695, and the new Model 43 Special Coupe, now $2,075. Prices f.o.b. Victoria.

Cleveland Six is showing buyers who make real comparisons a greater quantity of quality for their money. Come in. These beautiful cars tell their own story!

Many Points Good Driver Must Consider

A good driver must judge speed; momentum, which is influenced by the weight of the car; distance, with regard to stopping ability; and to space for passing other vehicles; time, as to how long it takes to act and how long after acting it takes to get the desired result; and intention—that is, the psychology of deciding what other drivers are likely to do. Since all these judgments must be made at practically the same moment, a driver's eye and brain must work in unison to solve these problems correctly and instantaneously, and action following the decision must be just as precise and prompt.

Uses of Cutout

As a matter of motorizing courtesy never use a cutout when travelling on a dusty road. It not only is very disagreeable to other drivers on the road, but also will raise dust, which will enter the rear of the car, especially when the wind is at the back.

Mixture Cleans Chassis

To remove grease on the chassis under the car, dissolve into a two-quart can containing one quart of hot water, one-fourth of a cake of yellow laundry soap cut into thin shavings, after which two or three tablespoons of gasoline are added. Use a stiff medium-sized paint brush.

either flat or round, to apply the mixture to all the greasy parts.

Road Map on Dash Board New Wrinkle

An auto map that can be used with one hand and interferes with steering but little is attached in a spring roller screwed into the dashboard beneath the instruments. Replacing hand maps, which usually means stopping the car and having the wind whip and tear the paper, the new chart is framed on two ends, giving rigidity. To inspect, the driver simply pulls out the roll. The spring returns it to position out of sight when reading is done. Entering another state a new map may be inserted rapidly.

CHRYSLER FOUR

Acclaimed everywhere as typical of Chrysler Quality

Canada has received the Chrysler Four with the declaration—heard from one end of the country to the other—that only such a master manufacturer as Walter P. Chrysler could produce such a car.

It was a foregone conclusion that so extraordinary a development of the four-cylinder principle and so outstanding a value, would be greeted with intense interest.

Conservative opinion hails the Chrysler Four as the most modern and the soundest contribution to finer four-cylinder engineering.

Unquestionably, there has never been a four at anywhere near the price that delivers the Chrysler combination of speed, smoothness, acceleration, pick-up, roadability, riding comfort and ease of handling, fuel mileage and charm of appearance. In every respect, it is a fitting companion to the famous Chrysler Six.

See it—ride in it—drive it!

We are eager to give you the opportunity to learn at first hand the many advantages of owning a new Chrysler Four.

Warn Motorists on Use of Air Cleaner

Installation Not Suited to Engine May Result in Damage to Car, Say Makers

An effective air-cleaner is an excellent thing for an automobile, but a word of caution seems to be necessary for individual owners who are having cleaners installed on cars not so equipped by the makers. The manufacturers of Paige and Jewett cars are sending such a warning to all owners, advising them strongly not to use any air-cleaner that has not been approved by the factory, and the same advice is good for owners of other makes as well.

A little thought will show why this advice is good, yet there are indications that many owners are purchasing air-cleaners without considering their adaptability to their particular engines.

A cleaner that will function efficiently on one engine may be either useless or actually detrimental when installed on an engine of different characteristics.

Two Types of Cleaners

There are two general types of air-cleaners. One filters foreign particles from the air by means of fine-meshed screens; the other separates the solid particles from the air by centrifugal action or by inducing high air-velocity that causes the solid particles to shoot past the inlet because of their momentum.

For any engine, the filter type must have sufficient area of screen to permit enough air to be readily drawn through it for all engine speeds, and this area must not be reduced by the collection of dust and dirt on the screen.

The problem with the centrifugal or velocity type of cleaners is more complex. Their efficiency depends on the speed at which the air passes through the cleaner, and unless the cleaner is designed for use with the particular engine on which it is installed, there is danger that it either will fail to remove the dust particles, or else so restrict the air passages that it will act as a drag on the motor.

Better Without Cleaner

Rather than incur the latter danger, it would be better to do without the cleaner. If the cleaner draws on the air intake, the result is just the same as if you run the engine with the choke partly closed. That is, excess fuel will be drawn through the carburetor jet, and raw gasoline will enter the cylinders. This is not only wasteful of fuel, but causes crankcase oil dilution, faulty lubrication, excess carbon formation, and other troubles.

It will be readily seen, therefore, that a cleaner must be designed to take into account the displacement and the speed of the engine, as these are the factors that determine the quantity of air drawn through the carburetor.

Besides the engine itself, the carburetor must be considered also. A cleaner designed for a carburetor that draws in the air from the rear cannot be attached to a carburetor whose intake faces the front, or vice versa. In either case, the cleaner would be collecting an excess of dust because its intake would be facing the air coming in through the radiator.

Furthermore, some carburetors have several air inlets or ports, and on these an air-cleaner attached to the main inlet would clean only a part of the air taken in.

Before buying an air-cleaner, consult the makers of your car. Every factory should willingly advise an owner who asks for recommendations as to the proper type of cleaner to be used with any particular model. In writing, give the engine number so that the factory may know just what type your engine is.

Electrical System Demands Attention

Lack of Inspection and Care Cause of Most Ignition and Lighting Troubles

By H. N. DAVOCK
Service Manager, Packard Motor Company.
Every automobile owner at this time of the year ought to give particular attention to the electrical equipment of his car to avoid trouble during the winter. During cold weather the electrical system has its hardest work of the whole year.

The great majority of all electrical trouble on a motor car is caused by a lack of inspection and care. Generators seldom burn out through defects of the units themselves. Difficulty usually is due to loose or dirty connections at contacts, such as the battery terminals, the ammeter and the junction box. This puts additional resistance in the generator circuit, which in turn causes the generator to overload in order to overcome this added voltage. This not only causes generator trouble, but it results in ignition points and headlights burning out, and in some cases injures the wiring of the car.

The automobile owner who will see at this time of the year that his car has a complete electrical inspection, and that all wire and cable connections are cleaned and tightened, may save himself considerable trouble during the rest of the winter.

Sir William Lettis, managing director of Willys-Overland Crossley, Ltd., European manufacturing plant of Willys-Overland, called the following report concerning the Olympia show in London: "High enthusiasm, voiced by everyone for new Willys-Overland products. More than $550,000 of orders taken at our exhibition." Sir William is president of the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders, Ltd., the organization which sponsors the Olympia show.

To Great Britain and continental countries the Olympia Motor Show is Willys-Overland representatives from Sweden, Switzerland, Belgium, Spain, Holland, Czechoslovakia, Rhodesia and other countries were on hand and expressed their delight in the Willys-Overland products, according to Sir William.

Brain Should Save Brakes Says Expert

Speed Fiends Are Most Careful Drivers Because of Correct Use of Grey Matter

"Use your head and save your brakes" is the slogan recently adopted by one of the largest motor organizations in the world, and according to officials, the advice has accomplished much in the way of lowering traffic fatalities.

It has been said that a motorist's head improves with use and it is accepted that his brakes deteriorate in direct proportion to the amount they are used. Consequently, all motorists agree that employing the former results in a material saving.

Race drivers are regarded as the most careless motorists in the world by some motor car owners and not a small number of them at that. Nothing could be further from the truth. In fact, they are probably the most careful and considerate to be on the highways.

Deny Taking Chances

To the casual observer, they appear reckless and careless of consequences on the speedway, but when questioned, none of them will admit that they ever took unnecessary chances. Their great speed, of course, increases the hazard, but their skill in handling cars, their knowledge of their machines and their realization that there is little hope for them in an accident, in a measure nullifies the dangers.

Nevertheless, many race drivers are killed in spite of their driving abilities. These accidents invariably occur on the race course. Seldom does a famous race driver ever figure in a wreck on the highways. They use their head and watch their step. They know what will result from carelessness and their example is worth following.

Education Helps

Education in public schools has reduced child fatalities more than five per cent in various states of the country during the first eight months of the year, as compared with the same period of 1924. Children are taught the dangers encountered on the streets and are watching their step.

Safety campaigns inaugurated by hundreds of state, county and national motor organizations would fall short of their purpose if members did not watch their step and exercise their mentalities.

Pointed Plug Avoids Carbon

Lower Tire Prices Unlikely For Many Months to Come

Spectacular Rise in Cost of Crude Rubber to Manufacturers Never Reflected in Quotations to Motorists and Present Represents Peak of Growers' Exactions

AKRON, O., Nov. 14.—(Special.)—

"Are tire prices coming down?" This is the question being asked by dealers and a great many automobile owners all over the country. The answer is that tire prices have never gone up in proportion to the spectacular rise in the price of crude rubber and present tire prices are based on rubber values considerably under the present rubber market.

In the month of August, 1924, the highest quotation on immediate delivery was 27 1/4 cents.

From this point rubber rose slowly, but more or less steadily until in April, 1925, it reached a high point of 45 1/4 cents.

The larger tire manufacturers always have rubber bought ahead for several months and during the early part of 1925 they resisted any price advances on tires. With rubber steadily advancing, however, the average cost to the manufacturer of tires was increasing and when rubber had gone from 27 cents to 45 cents tire prices were necessarily advanced in May.

Peak Reached in July

The month of May usually marks the beginning of the active tire buying season and with rubber consumption increasing and the world's surplus diminishing, it is not surprising that rapid advances in crude rubber prices occurred.

In May, rubber reached a high point of 69 1/4 cents. In June the high point was 89 1/4 cents. By July it reached $1.21, which is the highest price quoted for years. The price of $1.21, however, had little or nothing to do with present tire prices, as practically no rubber was bought at this price by the important tire manufacturers.

In other words, the $1.21 figure was largely fictitious as far as the cost of tires is concerned because practically no rubber at this price has entered into the production of tires. If it had, tire prices would be a lot higher than they are now.

With a high point of $1.21 and a low point of 41 1/4 cents in July there was a slight reaction in August, the high price being 35 1/4 cents and the low price being 21 1/4 cents.

Rubber Up 163 Per Cent

Seventy-one cents seems like a big drop from $1.21, and it is this decline that has caused many to wonder how soon a reduction in tire prices will occur.

The fact is, however, that present tire prices are based on rubber bought at less than 71 cents and lower than spot rubber has been quoted since May. This is easy to understand when one realizes that tire prices prior to May were established in October, 1924, and were based on rubber at about 27 cents.

The lowest price at which rubber has been available since June is 71 cents, which is an increase of 163 per cent over the rubber cost on which tire prices were based prior to May.

In the meantime tire prices have been increased only about 25 per cent.

It is evident, then, that the public is still getting the benefit of lower priced rubber purchased before the recent sharp advances and there is no likelihood of a reduction from present tire price levels unless rubber should decline materially.

Decline in Tires Unlikely

As a matter of fact, however, after a brief reaction early in August when spot rubber reached the low point of 71 cents, it immediately started to advance again.

If a price of even 71 cents were maintained permanently, tire prices would have to be advanced again after present stocks of lower priced rubber were exhausted. But in any event, with rubber at 87 cents as it present, there seems to be no possibility of any early decline in tire prices.

The following table shows the high and low spot rubber quotation for the past twelve months:

1924—	Price a Pound	High.	Low.
August .....	27 1/4	27 1/4	23 3/4
September .....	28 1/4	28 1/4	26 1/4
October .....	35 1/4	35 1/4	29 1/4
November .....	35 1/4	35 1/4	24 1/4
December .....	40 1/4	40 1/4	35 1/4

1925—

January .....	39 1/4	34 1/4
February .....	38 1/4	34 1/4
March .....	44 1/4	38 1/4
April .....	45 1/4	41 1/4
May .....	69 1/4	45 1/4
June .....	89 1/4	69 1/4
July .....	121 1/4	81 1/4
August .....	85 1/4	71 1/4

There is very little hope for lower tire prices in 1925.

Some Hope Seen in 1926

The seasonal decline in tire business this winter with the resulting reduction in production of tires will naturally cause a marked reduction in rubber consumption, especially since tire manufacturers have decided against any future dating this fall so that artificial stimulation to production and inventories will be withdrawn.

With a reduction in production and inventories, plus an additional release of 10 per cent more rubber in November under the Stephenson Act, there is some hope for lower rubber and tire prices in 1926, but this relief will not come soon enough to have any effect for some months to come.

It must be remembered that from the time rubber is purchased in the Far East it takes about three months to get it into the American tire manufacturer's plant, so that rubber released in November will not be available for tire production until January or February.

Earth's Highways Await New Ford

Latest Model Soon to Appear on All Roads of This Terrestrial Sphere

Highways and byways all over the globe will soon be dotted with a new line of Ford cars. And curiosity will be just as keen when the improved Ford appears on the streets of Paris, Berlin, Rome, Copenhagen or Yokohama as it was along Fifth Avenue or Hollywood Boulevard. The Ford is familiar in most every country on earth, will soon give way to the improved and better looking Ford.

With output rising to new records in this country, Ford plants throughout the world also are getting into production with the improved cars. Distribution to dealers and customers is already under way in several countries.

The Ford Motor Company of England, Ltd., began production on the improved cars at the Manchester plant October 10, and England was given its first view of these cars.

France, Belgium, Spain, Holland and the Scandinavian countries are just beginning to receive the improved Fords, as production is now under way at the plants in Antwerp, Barcelona, Bordeaux and Copenhagen. Germany also is beginning to receive Ford cars which are shipped from the Copenhagen plant. Shipments are on the way to the Trieste plant, and it will not be long before the new Fords will be on the roads of Italy.

The first cars for South America have been shipped to the company plant at Santiago, Chile, for distribution to dealers, and other South American plants will go into production in November. The Ford branch at Havana, Cuba, and the plant at Mexico City will soon be distributing cars to dealers.

The Orient will have its first glimpse of the improved Ford cars most any day now, as shipments of parts for assembly have just been received by the Ford Motor Company of Japan, Ltd., at Yokohama.

The Ford Motor Company of Canada, Ltd., which supplies Canada and the British colonial possessions, has been in production with the new cars for some time and has started shipping to Ford plants in New Zealand, Australia and South Africa.

Clean Windshields

Clean windshields give the driver a clear view ahead. Every car should have a secondary windshield (rain visor) or windshield wiper which will prevent snow or rain from obstructing the driver's view.

Great Bargains in Used Cars Featured

Authority Asserts Values at Present Offering Are Greatest Ever Seen

DETROIT, Nov. 14.—"The greatest bargain in the motor industry's history," is the manner in which used cars of today are characterized by Benjamin H. Cram, automotive authority and economist, in the current issue of his national dealer service, "Cram's Facts and Factors." Mr. Cram declares that the average used car of today has in it more value than the average new car of ten years ago, despite the fact that it is selling at the lowest used car price ever recorded.

"Today presents the greatest bargain opportunities for the man seeking a used car," says Mr. Cram. "This results from the changes that have occurred and are occurring in the used car market and in the attitude of people selling or buying used cars."

"For some time back, and continuing today, there has been a gigantic landslide the country over from open to closed cars. This has brought into the used-car market, long before they ordinarily would have reached it, hundreds of thousands of open cars which are comparatively new and in first-class shape, and which have in them a number of years of excellent service. These are being traded in for closed cars. This landslide right now is at its peak, because many open-car drivers desire to drive closed cars during the coming cold weather.

"In addition, thousands of almost unused cars of both open and closed types, in most cases in the lower-priced class, are being traded in for more powerful cars, the price of which has been sharply reduced since mid-summer.

Many Excellent Bargains

"The result is that today there are untold numbers of excellent used cars on the market, which have more service and long years in them and which are available to the buyer at prices lower than he has ever before experienced. Further, adding to this lower-price situation, is the fact that the landslide of cars into the used-car market has compelled many dealers and distributors to offer them at the price at which they were taken in rather than to hold them for a higher price, only to find themselves with an unmanageable number of used cars on hand. Also the dullest car-selling season of the year is on hand, and dealers prefer to make no profit rather than later take losses on their used-car stocks.

"It is possible that never again will buyers of used cars have the opportunity to pick up the bargains that are now available. Certainly they never again will be able to receive such high return in high quality, long life and unspunk mileage for their dollar."

Any Old Spark Plug Will Not Fill Bill

Many car owners are discovering that any old spark plug will not do for their engines. The plugs must be, not only good, but of the right size. This latter point is more than a matter of outward appearance and thread size. If the points of the plugs extend too far into the combustion chambers of the cylinders they will become overheated and will cause pre-ignition (knocking) and spark failure.

Technician Finds Cadillac Flawless

Grueling Climb of Fifty-Six Miles Finds Engine "Not Even Warm"

Technical representatives of an automobile company are hired to pick flaws, and they do. Yet George A. Schwitzer, technical representative of the Cadillac Motor Car Company, declares he can find no flaw in the new Cadillac.

"I rode up Lookout Mountain outside of Denver in a new Cadillac and after fifty-six miles of climbing the engine was not even warm," said Mr. Schwitzer. "At Mount Geneva, 8,339 feet in the air, the motor was not even warm and we averaged 13.4 miles to the gallon of gasoline. There is a Cadillac dealer in Southern California who originally must have been a Missourian. He just had to be shown. So he drove from Los Angeles to El Centro, a distance of 121 miles, with his spark retarded, and the engine never heated."

"It is such tests as these which have created an unprecedented demand for Cadillac this year. When I left the factory a few days ago 5,000 orders remained to be filled and production was being carried on by day and night shifts. That the new model was tested thoroughly before it was offered to the public is shown by the fact that there hardly has been any service necessary."

Always cover up the backs and seats with cloth when working inside the car. This will prevent dirt or oil or grease from soiling the upholstery. For the same reason the mudguards should be covered with something soft when working around the engine.

Six-Wheeled Busses Operate in Montreal

Two motor busses just like the above have gone into service on the Sherbrooke Street, Montreal, route. They weigh 13,000 lbs. each and are 29 feet 4 inches in length, with a carrying capacity of twenty-nine persons. They are equipped with six-cylinder 100-h.p. engines and a four-wheel brake system. In addition to increased traction power the four-wheel rear unit is said to reduce the danger of skidding.

Magistrate Cairns Blames Cyclists

Finds Motor Cyclists and Pedestrians Responsible for Many of London Fatalities

Many popular fallacies, despite innumerable refutations and repudiations, live on. One of these is that we, in Canada, are more reckless or careless of human life than they are in England and Europe, and that consequently our so-called motor fatalities greatly exceed theirs over there.

Recently Mr. J. A. R. Cairns, a Metropolitan police magistrate of London, England, in an effort to ascertain the chief cause of the rapidly increasing traffic accidents of the world's metropolis, made a 90-mile tour of London streets. His chief observations follow:

(1) Again and again I was aghast at the blank stupidity of pedestrians and the audacious recklessness of motorists.

(2) The drivers of "pirate" omnibuses exhibited neither the courtesy nor the skill of the trained drivers of the London General Omnibus Company.

(4) Most of the motor cyclists are asking for trouble. In the toll of road motor cyclists are usually involved.

His honor gave it as his opinion that "cyclists and pedestrians should be taught to understand that while motorists must drive with skill and caution, they are under no obligation to wet-nurse every passer-by on wheel or on foot."

An Amazing Faith

Magistrate Cairns declares: "After a 90-mile inspection of London street traffic, I am surprised at the fewness of street casualties. The faith of cyclists and pedestrians in motorists is the most amazing thing in the world. They attribute to them the wisdom, judgment and a maternal concern. No anxious mother ever watched with more anxious care the toddling steps of infancy than those attributed to motorists by other users of the road."

"Again and again I was aghast at the blank stupidity of pedestrians and the audacious recklessness of motorists. Again and again I was disappointed at the casual control by the police. Again and again I saw the floundering of policemen on traffic duty that no motorist could possibly translate into definite guidance."

No far as motorists are concerned, he declared that he observed that the reckless drivers were for the most part either professional drivers or motorists in the "tens. He declares that "grave injustice is done by an a priori inference that the motorist is always in the wrong."

In conclusion he states: "It is not the police who are the enemy of the motorist; it is the selfish, reckless, inconsiderate motorist, cyclist and pedestrian who have not learned the first law of a civilized community—to give the consideration and courtesy they reasonably expect. In all events I have learned enough of London traffic to keep an open mind."

White Trucks Make Records

Some Vehicles Make 100,000-Mile Run in Service Without Effort

In spite of occupational hazards the life of a good truck is still an unknown quantity and probably will remain so for who knows how long.

Because so many veteran trucks keep on working after many years of service, it has been found that miles, rather than years, is a better measure of truck longevity. Records annually compiled by the White Company, Cleveland, indicate that 100,000 miles is not only a common performance for White trucks and busses, but almost a standard unit of life measurement. Today the owners of 6,019 Whites report each one has gone 100,000 miles or more. Hundreds of others, of course, of which the company has no accurate records, have exceeded that mileage.

Seven hundred and fifty-nine Whites have run more than 200,000 miles, and 124 have achieved 300,000 miles or more and are still yielding dependable service, while thirty-eight have passed even the 500,000-mile mark, according to the owners' own reports.

Whites in all sections of the world—all models in all lines of business—have contributed to this record. A large percentage of them are 3½ and 5-ton trucks operating in the kinds of work which permit the attainment of long mileage only by many years of constant service.

Many are ten, twelve and fifteen years old, but still going strong long after they have been written off the books.

The 100,000-mile record of the White Company this year shows a gain of 1,748 trucks over last year's record.

Plebiscite to Be Taken on Question Of Independence

MANILA, Nov. 14.—For the "better information of the people and the Government of the United States" is the purpose of the bill passed by the Philippine Senate providing a plebiscite of the Filipino electorate on the independence question.

The bill as passed declares that although the Legislature is convinced that the Filipino people on several occasions have expressed in an unquestionable manner "their desire to enjoy freedom and independence," some way should be found to put down "the unfounded assertions of those in the United States who claim there is a considerable portion of the Filipino people opposed to absolute and complete emancipation."

The bill states that "for the better information of the people and Government of the United States it is necessary to express and reiterate in a direct manner and by constitutional methods the petition of the Filipino people for independence." It adds that the most adequate method for accomplishing such a purpose is the holding of a national plebiscite on the subject.

Use of Canadian-Grown Tobacco in The U.K. Increasing

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The increased utilization of Canadian-grown tobacco by United Kingdom firms is a noteworthy event of recent times, says the office of the High Commissioner for Canada, and is resulting in the further development of tobacco growing in Canada. The Dominion tobacco expert who has recently returned to Canada after a further investigation of conditions in Great Britain, reported to the Canadian London Trade Commissioner that no less than nine influential enterprises in Ontario and Quebec are now packing tobacco for export to Great Britain, where satisfactory connections have been established.

This year's tobacco crop of Canada is of excellent quality and yield. The total quantity of Burley, Green River and flue-cured or Canadian Virginia, is estimated at 20,000,000 lbs. or more, while the Quebec crop should reach about 8,000,000 lbs. Of this quantity, from 6,000,000 to 7,000,000 lbs. of Canadian tobacco is available for export and if a profitable market is secured in the British Isles, there will be a substantial increase in the production of leaf tobacco in Canada in 1926.

Americans Take Motors to Europe

Greater Convenience Has Induced Motorists From This Side to Use Own Cars

This season has witnessed an unprecedented increase in the number of Americans who have taken their cars with them while traveling abroad. According to a check made by the foreign office of the American Automobile Association, approximately 1,500 automobiles were shipped abroad during the first nine months of this year by American owners who wanted to tour Europe under their own power. This is an increase of 32 1-2 per cent over the twelve months of 1924.

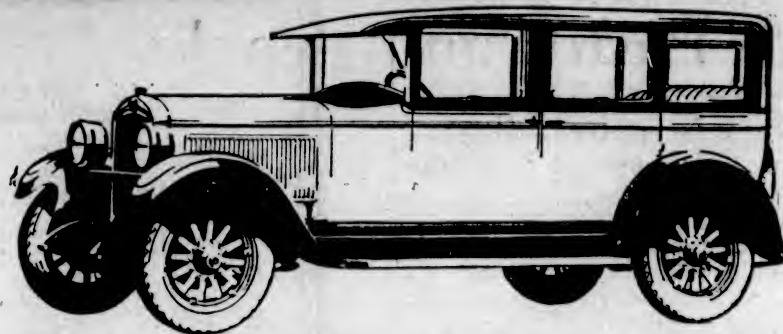

One of the reasons for the increase is that several of the steamship lines are now taking cars unboxed, while heretofore it was necessary to crate the car. Great Britain led the list of European countries attracting American motor tourists, with France second, and Germany third.

Another reason is that the American Automobile Association has made arrangements with the automobile clubs in England, Belgium, Holland and Germany, whereby they are in a position to issue trip tickets to American tourists going abroad with their cars. This arrangement avoids considerable red tape and inconvenience with customs officials at the port of entry.

Negotiations to effect similar arrangements with other European countries are in progress, and when completed, the tourist going abroad will be able to secure trip tickets covering his entire journey. According to present plans, it is only a question of a short time until Americans can take their cars with them wherever they go with as little trouble as they now have with their hand baggage.

BIRMINGHAM, Eng., Nov. 14.—A shilling a day for liquor seems "a moderate allowance for a man," said Lady Selborne in the course of a speech before the National Council of Women. "Drunkenness is the evil," she declared, "not moderate consumption of liquor, which is a gift of God for our benefit."

If a storage battery is to stand idle for a long time, it should first be fully charged, and should be given a fresh

It may be admitted that too often preachers fail to deal with the vital matters of the Christian faith, and instead fesse the attention of their congregation by disproportionate emphasis on matters of comparative unimportance. The clergy cannot be excused when they are guilty of this blunder, and if they plead that the people have no mind for higher things they may only reason why they should be more carefully instructed by more careful instruction. ## "Magic Rug" Keeps Speakers in Place

Use Psychology Rather Than Mechanical Means to Improve Broadcast of Lectures

Broadcasting officials have concocted psychological remedies which are guaranteed to glue public speakers before the microphone during an address and otherwise cure pernicious pacing and wandering about the lecture platform.

Credit for this unique discovery—called "the magic rug remedy"—goes to technical staff members at KOA, Denver broadcasting station of the General Electric Company. First announcement of the cure was made recently following a ten-month trial involving the worst offenders among national and Western speakers who have appeared before radio listeners.

Placed Before Microphone

"Not once has our magic device failed to turn the 'tick' asserted Alfred Thomas, radio engineer in charge of technical operations. 'Most any type of rug, dills the bill if it is soft and of contrasting color with the floor. It should, however, be of small dimensions, say three or four feet. It is placed a few feet from the microphone, the distance depending wholly upon the voice of the person to be heard.

"Unconsciously, the speaker assumes a position on the rug before the microphone and there remains until his remarks are concluded. Subsequently, he regards this piece of floor-covering, with its imaginary boundaries, as an island of safety and is disinclined to venture elsewhere about the stage. As a result, broadcast listeners are enabled to hear the talk in full. Otherwise, some of the speaker's comments would be lost to the invisible audience."

Ministers Best Behaved

Ministers, it was pointed out, are the best behaved before the microphone, while political speakers are the worst.

"KOA's plan to prevent a speaker from taking gymnastic exercises on the lecture platform is being widely declared Dr. D. K. Phillips, eminent psychologist of the University of Denver.

"The small rug upon which he stands gives him the unconscious, dimly conscious suggestion that it was intended for that specific purpose. As he proceeds with the talk, any tendency to step off likewise gives an unconscious warning.

"The opposite is also true—a wide open platform gives a stimulus to parade about."

RadioNotes

Timely Tips and Suggestions on the Latest Diagrams and Hookups—Simplified By F. M. RUSSELL

New Tools Make Building Easy

The importance of the general appearance of a set is becoming greater and greater every day. The radio set is entering the picture and victrola class and must therefore have a neat workmanlike appearance.

The new tools that have been recently developed especially for radio use materially aid the home-builder in making not only an efficient set, but also a neat appearing set.

There are several new types of pliers. One pair has a jaw rounded to different sizes for bending loops in wire. With these the soldering lug can be dispensed with and all connections be made direct to the terminals of the instrument. Another pair, equipped with a sort of reverse die into which the wire is inserted and the pressure of the jaw bends the wire into a loop.

When wiring a set it is often hard to accurately gauge the length of a wire connection. To facilitate this a measurer has been devised through which the wire is run. This measurer is ruled off in inches and can be used as a bender and rule as well.

Diagonal indicators and rheostat arrows add greatly to the beauty of the panel. They can be neatly engraved on the panel by using a sharp pointed tool and one of the engraving templates that are now obtainable. The shape of the arrow and pointer is stamped out of a piece of steel. This sheet is laid on the panel and clamped tightly. A sharp pointed instrument is then run around the edges and the mark is clearly outlined on the panel. It can then be filled with Chinese white or plain enamel chalk.

For laying out the holes to be drilled in a panel there are several automatic templates that can be used. These consist of three movable arms and a centre bushing that fits over the shaft of any instrument. The arms are placed directly over the mounting screws and fastened in place. The template is then laid on the panel and tapped with a hammer, which results in each hole necessary to the mounting of the instrument being marked on the panel.

When they turn us out, we're going to pay KOA a visit," the prisoners wrote.

One Man Directs Nine Sings Over One Radio

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 14.—An unusual feat was accomplished by the park board of Los Angeles in conjunction with Station KNX when community singing was held in nine city parks on a recent Sunday afternoon. The directing was all done by one man.

The parks of Los Angeles are equipped with receivers and public address systems, and input panels are centrally located at one of the parks where entertainment is regularly broadcast by being sent to KNX via telephone wires. These picked up by the receivers located in the various parks.

Hugo Kirekhofer, nationally-known community singing leader, was stationed at the microphone in Westlake Park and led the singing in the other eight parks by radio. A small band of trained singers were in each park to form a nucleus. The general community sing, the singing went on in each park just as though Mr. Kirekhofer was there in person.

Students' Battle Waxes Strenuous

Unprecedented Encounter Staged at Manchester, But Police Prove Victorious

MANCHESTER, Nov. 14.—A wild student battle was quelled yesterday afternoon in the city's available policemen were rushed to the scene and a dozen of the leaders were arrested.

British student clashes generally are expected to be fierce, but yesterday's fight was unprecedented. Two hundred university students invaded the College of Technology, armed with bricks, clubs, tear gas, and stones. They smashed the windows of the building, from which the deafening played fire horns at close range. Twelve policemen were dispatched to quiet the disturbances, but they became hopelessly mixed in the struggling mass of half-clad youths covered with snow, mud, yellow ochre and other such ammunition commonly used in student fraternities in Britain. Police headquarters then pressed into service all officers of duty and the students were put to rout, a number of them with injuries.

It is stated that the authorities intend to take drastic measures to prevent similar excesses in the future.

Victorian Order Spends Busy Month With Sick

A grand total of 685 visits for the Victorian Order of Nurses was reported by Miss Thornleigh in a statement read at the regular monthly meeting held at 424 Linden Avenue, with Mrs. Ross Sutherland in the chair. Analysis of the report showed the total number of cases for the month was 115, nursing visits being 348, infant welfare visits 22, maternal 26, post-natal 22, and social service 19. Miss Thornleigh also spoke of the great interest taken in the recently formed health hygiene classes among the girls of the C.G.L.T.

Good results were reported from the soliciting ladies in Spencer's store. It was decided that the V.O.N. would give assistance to the Women's Institute in its tag day November 28, for the proposed school health clinic. In the absence of the secretary, Mrs. Morrell, the duties of the office will be taken over by Miss Oldfield. Billing and the Misses Mary, Ashworth and Willing were gratefully acknowledged.

Upward Swing Comes to Halt

Selling Pressure Appears Against Industrials—Rail Issues Mount Higher

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(Continued from page 38.)—The upward movement of prices in today's stock market, but not until a score of rail issues had mounted their highest prices in a year, or longer. Trading was on an enormous scale, the day's sales of 1,556,000 shares being the largest of any half-holiday seen in about twenty years.

Rails were under heavy accumulation from the start with buying influenced by rumors of forthcoming increases in dividends of New York Central, Baltimore & Ohio, and some of the Western carriers.

Motors were heavily liquidated on the theory that the recent declaration of the 33 extra cents dividend on General Motors all the "good news" in sight had been discounted by that group.

United States Steel common was bid up to within a fraction of the year's high at 134½, but a flood of offerings appeared around that figure and carried the quotations down to 134.

Oil developed a temporary burst of strength under the leadership of Mardian and Mid-Continent, which were elevated to new 1925 high levels, but they later reacted with the rest of the list. Recent buying of these issues had been predicted on reports of an early increase in Eastern crude prices.

Exchanges Quiet
Foreign exchanges moved within rather narrow and irregular limits, with principal continental rates showing an easier tone.

Railroad issues led an advance in today's bond market, which was speculative possibilities, found no difficulty in attracting buyers. Several convertible issues forced into new high ground for the year with numerous gains of one to two points recorded.

Operation of 535 Ships May Change Hands

President Crowley Recommends That Control of President Liners Be Taken From Admiral Line

Statement of Plan Issued

Following the recommendation of President Crowley, of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, to the United States Shipping Board that the agency for the Government-owned fleet, operating out of Victoria, be taken from the Dollar Line, Mr. H. Stanley Dollar, president of the Admiral Line, has issued a statement setting forth what his company had offered to the Government.

Mr. Dollar's offer to the Government included the five passenger liners and nine freighters the company is operating from Puget Sound to the Far East for the Government. Mr. Dollar offered to charter the vessels. The passenger liners operated by the Admiral Line out of Seattle and Victoria to the Orient are as follows: President Jefferson, President Jackson, President McKinley, President Madison and President Grant. They are known as "535" type ships.

The following is the statement issued by Mr. Dollar after President Crowley had recommended a change in the agency:

"The plan I offered would save the taxpayers $500,000 annually and the nation would still have the finest service to the Orient by the shortest trans-Pacific route.

"We offered to take the ships on a bareboat charter basis, with a sale price attached to the charter for a period of years until purchase could be arranged. We would pay so much for the hire of the ships. We are still working out the details of this plan, to which the Shipping Board has not given favorable attention.

"The Shipping Board can sell, charter or operate the Government-owned fleet, with preference in the foregoing order. Charter of the Puget Sound fleet would be one step nearer the goal of the Shipping Board than the present plan."

Tokio Maru in From Far East

N.Y.K. Liner in Communication With Ryuwo Maru Disabled in Mid-Pacific

Experiencing stormy weather throughout the entire trip, the Nippon Yusen Kaisha liner Tokio Maru docked from the Orient yesterday morning to discharge 500 tons of cargo, before proceeding to Seattle.

The Tokio Maru was also in communication with the Ryuwo Maru, reported in distress in mid-Pacific. Captain I. Nirei, of the Tokio Maru, reported that the Ryuwo Maru's deckwork had been smashed to splinters by the heavy seas which struck that vessel, but that she was now proceeding on her way to Yokohama at reduced speed.

The Tokio Maru brought in a large and varied cargo. There were 4,000 bales of silk on board for transshipment to New York, while other features in the cargo included 8,333 cases of tea, 1,553 cases of lily bulbs, 1,535 cases of porcelain, 2,603 parcels of rattan, 241 cases of Japanese-made toys, 486 packages of camphor and a large shipment of general freight. Eighty-five sacks of mail were set down here.

Bringing Christmas Supplies From Orient

C.P.S. EMPRESS OF CANADA
Two and a half million Manila cigars for the Christmas trade will arrive on the Empress of Canada, which is due in from the Orient, Monday morning. The liner is bringing in the first shipment of silk, consisting of 750 tons, and a mixed cargo, 925 tons, destined overseas. 500 tons for discharge at Victoria, ten tons for Puget Sound ports, and 180 tons routed via the Panama Canal complete her manifest. She will bring in about 500 passengers.

C.P.S. Lumber Company Loses Mr. W. Johnston

Prominent Figure Among Pacific Coast Lumbermen Leaves for Vancouver Position With Barnett Co.

Mr. W. Johnston, assistant general manager of the Canadian Puget Sound Lumber Company, left Victoria last night for Vancouver to take over the position of assistant general manager of the Barnett Lumber Company, Vancouver. Mr. Johnston was appointed to the position of assistant general manager of the C.P.S. Lumber Company, replacing Mr. Johnston.

Mr. Johnston is a well known figure in the lumber world, being looked upon as an authority on all things Pacific seaboard. Very seldom has Mr. Johnston's forecast of lumber markets been known to fail and as a parting prediction Mr. Johnston says that he expects that the Japanese lumber market will rally toward the end of the year, while many heavy

Maquinnas Meets With Heavy Pacific Seas

The Princess Maquinnas was reported at Christie's School, Clayoquot Sound, at 5 o'clock yesterday morning. The Maquinnas, which has met with severe weather, has been somewhat delayed on this run. She has now overtaken the surplus of freight and will be able to handle the business alone. Meanwhile, the Princess Ena, which was put on the route for the purpose of aiding to remove the surplus, has completed her voyage and has returned here.

Weather Report

Strike Causes Huge Losses to British Ships

More Than 380,000 Tons of Shipping Tied Up by Seamen's Strike—Loss Estimated at $3,750,000

About 4,000 Men Affected
Much delay in shipping and loss in trade is reported in Australia as a result of the British seamen's strike, according to news brought in on the Ms. Aorangi. About forty-four British ships in Australian ports are affected by the strike, the aggregate tonnage of the vessels being about 281,500 tons.

Thirteen vessels, of a total tonnage of about 111,800 tons, have been lying idle in Sydney harbor for nearly two months, and the other steamers, thirty in number, with an aggregate tonnage of about 240,000 tons, are tied up in other ports.

Only an approximate computation of the loss to British shipping interests as a result of these ships being out of commission can be gained. The estimate of the cost of having their ships held up as between $250 to $300 a day. The loss so far, taking these figures as a basis, may be set down at about $750,000 or $750,000.

The loss of freight to British ships has been enormous, and has been the gain of shipowners. In ordinary circumstances competition on the part of foreign ships has been keen since the war, and there is danger that foremen will reap a permanent advantage at the expense of British shipowners.

From the point of view of the men on strike the loss has also been disastrous. About 4,000 seamen, firemen, and other ratings are affected by the strike, and have already lost two months' pay. It is estimated that the men on strike in Australian ports have lost about $15,000 or $175,000.

Shipping Notes

The Princess Charlotte dropped a propeller blade en route from Seattle Friday. Repairs were effected yesterday, and she resumed her regular run yesterday afternoon to the Mainland.
